JUDGE HYLAN IN RACE FOR MAYOR TO STAY, HE SAYS

FINDS A 5-BOROUGH REVOLT

PUTS GUARD ON HIS WORDS

Stenographer Discarded, However, When He Defines His Nomination as "a Triumph of the People."

County Judge John F. Hylan of Brooklyn, Tammany's candidate for Mayor unless he withdraws or is deposed in the primaries, came to the city yesterday from Saratoga, where he has been on vacation, and went over with his friends the preliminary plans of his campaign. The candidate arrived unannounced and unknown at the headquarters of the Business Men's League in the Heckscher Building, 50 East Forty-second Street. Not a single district leader or politician was in sight, and their absence gave confirmation to the report that his selection is extremely unpopular among the lesser leaders in Fourteenth Street.

Judge Hylan arrived in time to learn of increased defection on the part of Tammany leaders, who are thoroughly disappointed at the city and county tickets selected by Charles F. Murphy. Following the resignation of Surveyor of the Port Thomas E. Rush, leader of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District, from the Tammany Executive Committee, and his entrance into the primary fight as a candidate for Supreme Court Justice, Joseph T. Ryan, a lawyer, of 149 Broadway, and one of the leading Democrats in the Fifteenth Assembly District, of which Ross Williams is leader, filed a petition at the Board of Elections yesterday as a candidate in the Democratic primary for Justice of the City Court. It was said that Ryan will have the support of Leader Williams and many of the Tammany men in his district.

The revolt in the Tammany organization over the selection of the Hylan ticket reached Richmond yesterday and thus encompassed the five boroughs of the city. In one way and another there will be waged primary fights in New York, Kings, the Bronx, Queens and Richmond against candidates selected by the regular Democratic organizations of the various boroughs. On Staten Island a contest will be made by Matthew J. Cahill against Calvin D. Van Namee, the regular Democratic candidate for President of the Borough. Cahill ran for Coroner of Richmond several years ago on the Democratic ticket and polled a record vote. His candidacy this year is being backed by many disgruntled Democrats of the borough, including Alderman Charles P. Cole, who refused a renomination by the organization.

Although he would not discuss the five-borough revolt in the Democratic organization, Judge Hylan appeared to realize the seriousness of the situation. The candidate said he had not seen Charles F. Murphy since his return and had not communicated with him in any way. Neither had he conferred with John H. McCooey of Brooklyn, who is given credit for having "put Hylan over" on Murphy. He admitted that he had talked with McCooey before his designation. The Judge said that his designation had come unsought by him, and that he was as much surprised as any one when he was named by the Democratic Fusion Committee and the Business Men's League.

Will Stay in Race.

One thing Judge Hylan insisted upon was that he had no intention of withdrawing from the Mayoralty race. It was up to the people, he said, to determine if he was wanted, and he intended to stand or fall by the people's verdict. He admitted that he would withdraw if he was beaten in the primary on Sept 19, but until then he was going to stock. The people, and the people alone, he said, would decide his political fate.

When the candidate reached town he went at once to his chambers in the Kings County Court House. His friends who called upon him there remarked upon the change in his manner. They said that his aggressiveness was gone and that he had developed into a cautious, careful politician. The Judge gave evidence of this when he was asked to discuss his campaign. He weighed each question with extreme care, and only answered after he had called in a stenographer to take down every word. He was asked first about the report that he might be requested to step aside in favor of William R. Hearst. After the stenographer had arrived, the Judge replied:

"If the people of New York want me to run for Mayor, I'll run."

"Have you been asked to withdraw?" was the next question.

"Positively not. If the people want me to run, I'm going to run." The Judge then declared that he would stand on the platform of the party as adopted and that his only purpose was to serve the people. He said he was a believer in municipal ownership and operation.

"Will you run on the same ticket with a pro-German?" Judge Hylan was next asked.

"What is that? Repeat that question," he replied, quickly. The question was repeated, with the explanation that Representative Henry R. Bruckner was

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 20.—At the close of his visit to the German High Sea Fleet at Wilhelmshaven, Emperor William issued the following address to the fleet:

"After having recently received an announcement that a renewed heavy attack of the enemy, in an attempt to break up our sea front in Flanders, had been successfully repelled, I have today, by a visit to my fleet and the island fortress of Heligoland, been enabled to convince myself of the strength and security of this front too. I express my warm appreciation to all the high sea forces on the water, under water, and in the air, and to the fortress of Heligoland, for their untiring, self-sacrificing, and successful labor, by means of which they have kept firmly in view and attained this aim. May the fleet remain conscious that the confidence of myself and the Fatherland reposes firmly on it."

The Emperor distributed a number of Iron Crosses. His visit is reported to have been caused by the threat of strikes at the Wilhelmshaven Arsenal.

LOVETT APPOINTED COAL TRAFFIC HEAD

PRICE FIXING COMES NEXT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The first definite step to set in motion the machinery by which the Government will gain complete control of the coal industry of the nation, was taken today by President Wilson when Robert S. Lovett, was designated as Federal Agent under the Priority Shipments act, and directed forty-six railroads to give bituminous coal shipments from the mines for the Northwest via the Great Lakes precedence over other business.

Among the railroads placed under this order, which is drastic and mandatory, are the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, the Baltimore & Ohio and other great systems which carry coal from most of the large bituminous fields. The President acted because of information that coal was not being shipped to the lake ports, for reshipment by water to the Northwestern State, in quantities deemed necessary to meet the demands made by the unusual war-time conditions.

Copies of the order were sent tonight by registered mail to all of the companies involved. The rules set forth will go into effect immediately.

The dispatch of the orders comes in a sense as a warning not only to the railroads, but to all branches of the coal industry as well that the President believes that a grave emergency exists and is in a mood to exercise the drastic powers conferred upon him to the full when be believes the situation justifies such action.

Judge Lovett is a member of the War Industries Board, and has charge of questions of priority for that organization also.

Price Fixing Is Next Move.

The next step—price fixing—may come tomorrow, as the President had another long conference late this afternoon with the Federal Trade Commission. No official announcement has been made to indicate whether the President will decide to commandeer mines and operate them or simply purchase output and pool and resell it. Power to do either is given him in the Food Control bill, and it is certain that for the present at least he will adopt the latter course.

In that event a separate organization, headed by a Coal Controller, charged with the duty of purchasing from the operators at a price to be fixed on the finding of the production cost investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, will be appointed to purchase from the operators and provide for distribution. There has been a report that Judge Lovett might be placed in charge of this work as well as the questions of priority included in today's order, but no confirmation could be obtained.

Both tasks, under present conditions, assume stupendous proportions, and are closely associated. If another man than Judge Lovett is named as the organization head, because of the mass of the work involved, the two will undertake the closest co-operation.

It was said today that Herbert C. Hoover, Food Administrator, could not attempt the task because of the work already placed upon his shoulders in the effort to regulate foodstuffs. There is little chance that the Federal Trade Commission or any member will act in this capacity.

Judge Lovett issued his order following a brief conference at the White House, soon after the President returned from his visit to the Federal Trade Commission. The fact that the order was released under these circumstances was taken as evidence that the program for price-fixing would follow within a very short time.

Text of Lovett Order.

The order reads:

Whereas by the act of Congress entitled, "An Act to amend the act to regulate commerce, as amended, for other purposes," approved August 10th, 1917, it is provided that during the continuance of the war in which the United States is now engaged, the President of the United States is authorized, if he finds it necessary for the national defense and security, to direct that such traffic or such shipment of commodities as, in his judgment, may be essential to the national defense and security shall have preference or priority in transportation by

Dr. Bernfeld and L. J. Cherey of Board 99 Confess Taking $4,000 in Bribes.

MAXIMUM SENTENCES GIVEN

U. S. District Attorney, Opposing Fines, Says Government Wants No 'Tainted Money.'

GRUHER'S TRIAL GOES ON

Dr. S. J. Bernfeld and Louis I. Cherey, former members of Local Exemption Board 99 at Rivington and Lewis Streets, pleaded guilty before United States District Judge Martin T. Manton yesterday morning to the charge of conspiring to defeat the Conscription act, by taking bribes to exempt men called before their board.

Overruling their pleas for leniency, which were based mainly on the allegation that they had taken bribes only from those who were physically unfit and would be exempted anyway, thus cheating individuals rather than the Government, Judge Manton imposed sentences of two years in Atlanta on each, this being the extreme jail penalty. Fines which might have been $10,000 each were not imposed, because the two men are refunding the bribes they collected and because Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox and Judge Manton agreed that the Government did not want to accept tainted money. Kalman Gruher, who was charged with taking part in the conspiracy as a go-between, pleaded not guilty and his trial was soon under way.

The plea of guilty for Bernfeld and Cherey was entered to the specific charge of accepting a bribe of $300 from Jacob Leicher to adjudge him unfit for military duty. Another charge of accepting $200 from J. Schwissky faces the two men, but by consent of the United States District Attorney's office it will not be pressed now. K. Henry Rosenberg, counsel for Bernfeld and Cherey, announced at the opening of court that his clients, who had pleaded not guilty on last Thursday, had decided to change their pleas to guilty. Assistant United States District Attorney Edwin M. Stanton said:

Part of Bribes Paid Back.

"These men claim that the only cases in which they accepted money were those where the registrants were unfit physically and would be subject to exemption on physical grounds. We are inclined to believe that this was for the most part true. They confessed to me on Saturday last in my office that they had obtained between $3,000 and $4,000. A portion of this amount has already been paid back to the men who gave it and the rest, the prisoners assure us, will be repaid."

Mr. Stanton added that Dr. Bernfeld had borne a good reputation up to the time he became involved in the graft scandal, but that Cherey was not so highly regarded. Attorney Rosenberg began his plea for leniency with the assertion that his clients had not in the beginning been actuated by criminal motives.

"How can men take money to break the law without criminal intent?" asked Judge Manton.

Mr. Rosenfeld explained that he meant that Cherey and Bernfeld in the first place only intended to favor old friends without thought of money gain for themselves, but that they were corrupted when conscripts came along and offered large bribes. He continued:

"They then fell a prey to cowardly scoundrels who sought to buy their way out and, not being exempted, have come forward against these men in revenge."

Mr. Rosenberg pointed out that Cherey had a wife and three children and that Rosenfeld had three children as reasons for leniency. Assistant United States District Attorney Knox said:

"These two men are above the average in intelligence, and each has had the advantage of education. They can offer no excuse on this score and admit their guilt. We can find no reason for leniency. The Government has no desire to accept tainted money from these men in the form of fines, but it does wish to insist that they be obliged by the law to give up portions of the span of life allotted to them. We therefore urge that the maximum penalty be imposed upon them in the matter of imprisonment."

Get Maximum Sentences.

Judge Manton decided to pass sentence immediately on the two men and said that he agreed with the views of the Assistant United States District Attorney. He continued:

"As the United States District Attorney has stated, the Government does not wish to accept tainted money in the form of a fine, but I can see no reason for leniency toward educated men who have committed a felonious crime against the Government in a time of great stress.

"They can be credited with only one act of decency in connection with the matter and that is paying back some of the money they accepted as bribes and their expressed intention of paying back the balance. I regret that the law does not empower the court to inflict a heavier sentence in these cases. It is ordered that the defendants be imprisoned in the Atlanta prison for a term of two years."

The trial of Gruher was taken up immediately. A jury was drawn in an hour. The first witness for the Gov-

To Empty Prisons in Hungary Because of Food Shortage

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 20.—The food situation in Hungary has led the Hungarian Minister of Justice to order the clearing out of prisoners in the jails, according to advices received here. Arrests also are to be reduced to a minimum.

Criminals sentenced to less than two years' imprisonment, whose "social position has not been broken," will be given an indefinite leave, and also in special cases persons who have been sentenced to terms over two years will be released, as the Minister does not desire to submit prisoners to unnecessary suffering because of inadequate prison fare.

AIMS AT GREATEST DESTROYER FLEET

Daniels Seeks the Doubling or Trebling of Output in the Next 18 Months.

CONFERENCE WITH BUILDERS

Maximum Capacity of Yards to be Used—Secretary Heeds Advice of Naval Officers.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Immediate expansion of shipbuilding facilities in the United States to double or treble the output of destroyers during the next eighteen months was the object of a conference today between Secretary Daniels and representatives of twenty-five or more ship and engine builders.

"If we get what we want," the Secretary said, "the United States will have more destroyers than any other power. They are the one thing that a submarine fears."

The Secretary indicated that all the destroyers which the builders could produce would be ordered. Every effort of the department will be used in speeding up work on the large number of contracts pending.

Every aspect of shipbuilding that bears on destroyer production was taken up at the conference. There is no shortage of material or plant facilities, but a difficulty lies in obtaining high-power engines, boilers, and reduction gear.

Secretary Daniels said no additional submarine chasers would be ordered at present. The chasers are valuable for harbor and in-shore-patrol work, but the destroyers are far superior even for these duties and have in addition seagoing qualities which make them of far greater value in all ways than the small chasers.

Every suggestion that the ship or engine builders had to make as to additional motive power for the destroyers was given close attention. The possibility of equipping some of the new vessels with oil engines was among the suggestions offered.

As to the plants at which the new destroyers will be laid down, Secretary Daniels said he favored expansion of those now building destroyers as the most efficient means of speeding up. Experience gained in previous building will enable such plants to turn out new ships more quickly, it is felt, than would be possible for a new plant lacking that experience.

Secretary Daniels's decision shows that the officers who have been contending that the best answer to the U-boat was to turn out an enormous number of destroyers have carried their point. The experience of all allied navies that the destroyer is more deadly to submarines than any other type of craft is borne out by reports from Vice Admiral Sims, founded on the actual experience of American destroyers in European waters.

Another aspect is the problem of furnishing convoys to troops and supply ships, which will grow as American forces in France are increased. Many officers believe that destroyer convoys guarantee a large degree of security from submarine attack. The thing needed, in their view, is an adequate number of destroyers to make certain that supply lines are not interrupted. The department apparently has approved this view.

The average underwater speed of submarines is about ten knots an hour, although the big ocean-going submarine cruisers turned out by the Germans have a surface speed of probably eighteen knots. Steamers employed as troop ships make not less than twelve knots an hour, so that they need not fear underwater attack from the rear. With destroyer convoys to protect them ahead, virtually only chance encounters with submersibles which lie directly in their paths are to be expected.

No figures have been made public of the number of the destroyers now building. Secretary Daniels said today that they represented the maximum capacity of the country. To increase that capacity will require the expansion of every existing plant and the addition of new engine and boiler works.

BRITISH ADMIRAL LOOKS FOR A BIG SEA FIGHT

Hibbert, Who Watched This Port Before We Entered War, Says This Is Kaiser's Last Resort.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 20.—Rear Admiral H. T. Hibbert of the British Navy, who was familiar to Americans when the Lusitania was sunk as Flag Captain in command of the Port of Queenstown, arrived here today on an armed merchantman and is on a special mission for the British Admiralty.

"I have watched the Capes so long from the outside," he said, "that I am mighty glad to be inside them at last." For many months Admiral Hibbert was in charge of the fleet that stood guard outside the Port of New York and off Cape Charles and Cape Henry. He was then recalled to England and later sent out on his present errand.

Although he has been in active service since the beginning of the war, he said that he had never seen a German submarine. As to the effectiveness of submarine warfare, he said that, while the situation called for unrelaxed vigilance and was undoubtedly serious, he did not believe that it would ever be effectual.

"Personally," he added, "I believe that they have done their worst. The natural wastage is very great, and it does not seem possible that the Germans can continue to put out submarines at a rate to keep up their record."

He believes that the Germans will not end the war, however, without a great naval battle, and is of the opinion that they are holding back the navy as a last resort. "I see by the papers," he said, "that the Kaiser recently visited the fleet at Wilhelmshaven, and I am hoping that it foreshadows a move in that direction."

RUSSIA WILL SAY 'NO' TO THE POPE; ALLIES IN TOUCH

CALLS PLAN UNDEMOCRATIC

LANSING EXCHANGES VIEWS

Lord Robert Cecil Announces in Commons That Allies Will Have a Conference.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—That Russia will reject the Pope's peace proposals was forecast today in a statement by Boris Bakhmeteff, the Russian Ambassador, which is supposed to have been issued by direction of the Provisional Government at Petrograd, although there is no official acknowledgment to that effect. The statement of the Ambassador reads:

"The answer to the Pope's peace proposals has not yet been formulated by the Russian Government, but there is a feeling in Russia that these proposals have been made with some inspiration from the Central Powers. It is considered in Russia that the very bases of the Vatican's proposals are inconsistent with the democratic aims of the Russian people in this war, and are not acceptable from that point of view."

It also became known today that the United States Government was exchanging views with the Governments of the allied powers on the subject of the character of the answer to be made to the Pope's proposals. The State Department would admit only that the exchanges were "informal," and announced that no response would be made to the Pope until these exchanges had been concluded. There is a striking similarity between what was said at the State Department and the announcement in the House of Commons by Lord Robert Cecil.

America May Reply Separately.

The State Department indicated that this Government did not expect to participate in any formal meeting of delegates of the Allies, although its course would be determined as a result of Allied conversations.

The belief is growing here that the members of the Entente will make a joint response through the medium of the British Government, while the United States will send to the Vatican a separate reply in which the specific aims of the American Government will be set forth. It is the gossip in well-informed quarters in Washington that Russia may make a separate answer on account of popular pressure in that country, especially because of insistence by the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' and Peasants' Delegates. Belgium may also send a separate statement of views in which her own particular interest in defeating the Prussian autocracy would be explained.

The announcement of the Russian Ambassador is the first authorized statement that has come from a representative of any of the belligerent nations on the subject of the peace overtures. It has been generally understood that the Entente nations, with the possible exception of Russia, whose disposition was not made known until today, found the suggestions of the Pontiff at variance with the aims which they have agreed to accomplish in the great struggle against militarism and autocracy.

The responses to be made by the nations at war with Germany will be a landmark in the conflict, in the opinion of observers here. They will fix definitely in the mind of the world, it is hoped, an impression that the turning point in the war has come. Since the indications from Berlin that Germany's most ardent desire at this time is the success of the Pope's proposals, the hope held in Washington that the beginning of the end of hostilities is at hand has grown into conviction.

Among the men best qualified to judge of conditions in Europe, the opinion is at last being voiced that Germany realizes that her cause is lost. This does not mean, these men explain, that the war is to end soon in German collapse. But they contend, on the basis of close knowledge of the progress of events in Europe, that little by little the Teutonic resistance will give way before the onslaught of the Allies.

Insist Militarism Must End.

The inspiration of the responses to be made by the Allied nations to the proposals of Pope Benedict is that Germany must be brought to the point of realization that militarism must end, and the world must be made free from its menace, with the attendant dangers to peace and happiness.

The feeling that Germany is now on the losing side has not served to diminish the active preparations of the United States Government for ending the war. On the contrary, the Government is going ahead with the idea of engaging in a long struggle. All the preparations contemplate a continuance of hostilities for at least three years, with the idea firmly fixed that the preparedness program shound be so arranged that the

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 20.—A neutral traveler recently in Ghent tells THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that he witnessed the constant arrival of long trains of German wounded whose condition was appalling. The Germans, he says, pile their wounded anyhow, often into open trucks, and he declares the evidence of their colossal losses is overwhelming.

The neutral denies the stories of depressed British prisoners dragging themselves through the streets. He saw a detachment of British prisoners arriving from the Flanders front. They marched through the streets, heads up, at a swinging pace, shouting: "Are we downhearted? No!"

By The Associated Press.

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, Aug. 20.—Examination of the German prisoners taken by the British shows that out of 940 questioned more than 25 per cent. belonged to the 1918 class. Noncommissioned German officers relate how they are hampered by the demoralization of the younger recruits with whom they are supplied. They say they cannot rely upon these youngsters, and similar complaints are heard about the inefficiency of the young German officers.

The demoralization of certain German regiments at Langemarck and Polygon Wood last Thursday was complete, and this was due, according to captured noncommissioned officers, to the preponderance of eighteen-year-old youths in the ranks.

The 261st and 202d Regiments of the Seventy-ninth Division fled to the rear at Langemarck and many were killed by the British artillery as they ran. Both regiments were ordered to counterattack, but could not because they were so exhausted and nerveracked.

The French have captured about twenty-five German guns since the present offensive began on July 31, and the machine guns taken are innumerable. Some of the captured redoubts were found to be veritable nests of machine guns.

ITALIAN SUCCESS ALARMS AUSTRIA

5,000 GUNS BLASTING WAY

ROME, Aug. 20.—The Italians in their offensive on the Isonzo front, begun yesterday, have crossed the Isonzo River north of Gorizia and already have taken 7,600 prisoners, it was officially announced by the War Department today. Guns and many machine guns have been captured, and the Austrians have suffered serious losses. The infantry battle continues vigorously. The statement follows:

> A battle is proceeding on the Julien Alps front. Yesterday morning, after a bombardment of twenty-four hours, during which our artillery shelled the enemy positions with ever-increasing intensity, masses of our infantry commenced the advance toward their objectives. To the north of Anhovo, (seven and one-half miles north of Gorizia,) after having brilliantly overcome technical difficulties and the resistance of the enemy, numerous pontoons were thrown across the Isonzo and our troops passed over to the left bank of the river.
> From Plava to the sea, after having crossed the first line of the enemy, which had been destroyed completely, our troops brought pressure to bear upon him. Resisting strongly, and being supported by considerable artillery and a large number of machine guns, the enemy offered desperate resistance.
>
> Altogether 208 airplanes indefatigably participated in the battle, attacking repeatedly with bombs and machine guns the troops assembled to the rear of the enemy's positions. The infantry action vigorously continues, while the artillery also is proceeding energetically with its work of destruction.
> The enemy's losses are very serious. The booty reported up to the present is very considerable. Some guns and a large number of machine guns are in our hands. Up to last evening more than 7,500 men and about 100 officers passed into our collecting stations.

Commenting on the new advance, the press here says that it, like the British attack in Flanders, will be of service if it demonstrates how the people and armies of the allied countries feel toward the "premature" peace proposals of Pope Benedict. It is held that Austria apparently realizes the gravity of the situation, as announcement is made that Emperor Charles is soon to visit the Austro-Italian front, presumably to encourage his troops.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 20.—The special correspondent of the Cologne Gazette on the Isonzo front has telegraphed as follows to Berlin:

"The artillery concentration for the eleventh Isonzo battle surpasses all earlier preparations. The roar of over 5,000 cannon in uninterrupted activity can be heard deep into Tyrol. The presence of a great number of British and French guns of the heaviest calibre has been established."

LONDON, Aug. 20.—A dispatch to The Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen says that according to reports received from Austria the battle now raging on the Isonzo front of the Austro-Italian theatre is characterized as the most violent ever fought there. The advices add that it is believed by the Austrians and Germans the Italians are making an attempt to break through to Trieste.

A colossal number of new guns have been brought into the fight, for which the Italians had been preparing for weeks. Yesterday Italian aviators dropped proclamations over the Austrian lines saying that the bombardment would be continued for many hours.

TANKS ALONE WON AN YPRES VICTORY

British Monsters Took Many Strong Redoubts and Captured Germans in Groups.

INFANTRY FOLLOWED CLOSE

Shelling in Flanders Continues Day and Night, Growing More and More Intense.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 20.—At dawn yesterday there was an attack by tanks upon German ground north of St. Julien and it is the first time, I think, that tanks have gone out alone like this to capture a position. Twelve went out over bad ground, all churned up by the bombardment and full of pits.

Before their going the British turned on a great barrage and the enemy, believing the infantry would follow, replied with a violence of shell fire. Nothing happened then until across the paling ground as dawn crept down the sky those dozen tanks crawled up and made their way slowly across the cratered earth, still slimy and boggy, toward the "Three Farms," as they were called, although there is nothing farmlike there, but only three concrete houses mounted with machine guns and garrisoned by picked men.

They are brave men, these Germans who hold these advanced posts against the British lines, but their courage ebbed when the tanks crept close to them and rising up over the shell craters fired furiously at their emplacements and then advanced again with flames cleaving their flanks and machine gun bullets pouring from their loopholes. A number of Germans were killed and wounded in these places and others surrendered. The tank pilots sent word back for the infantry and they came and took back the prisoners and occupied the ground over which the tanks had gone. They were plucky lads, these pilots and their crews, and they did a difficult and ugly job with absolute success.

There has been no great infantry action since I last wrote. There is heavy shell fire on the wide crescent around Ypres, and by night as well as by day the sky is busy with airplanes, British and enemy machines raiding and reconnoitring. Last night the gunfire was so terrific in its noise over all the countryside, and the sky so throbbing with the light of shells and alive with tongues of flame licking up above the dark belts of woods on the way to Ypres that people believed a great battle was again in progress, but it was only the night bombardment, which every night seems to grow more intense as the enemy shells the British lines and they shell his in destructive competition.

On any night that his air raiders are out the British searchlights wander about the sky to find them, converge upon them in a great cluster of illumination and in the white glare of it one sees the twinkle of bursting shrapnel while overhead there is the loud, sinister drone of the flying engines who come to drop death upon sleeping villages and tents where tired men are resting after the battle. The British raiders cross the German lines in greater swarms and with heavier loads of bombs, in many cases, so there is no peace in night.

Germans Rushing Troops From Galicia to Flanders

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 20.—A frontier telegram to the Echo Belge says that numerous troops are arriving in Flanders from Galicia.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—French troops won a smashing victory today on a front of over eleven miles north of Verdun, the scene of many of the hottest engagements of the Verdun campaign last year. The advance, which was preceded by a heavy artillery fire lasting three days, reached at some points a depth of over a mile and a quarter. The number of unwounded Germans taken exceeds 4,000.

The French attacked simultaneously on both banks of the Meuse and everywhere carried their objectives. On the left or west bank of the river the attackers gained Avocourt Wood, the summits of Dead Man Hill, and the Corbeaux and Cumières woods.

Describing the situation on this side of the river, the Temps correspondent at Bar le Duc says:

"The last phase of the artillery preparation for the French attack in the Verdun region ended at 4:40 o'clock this morning. Our troops assaulted between Avocourt Wood and Bezonvaux. By 6 o'clock our first objective had been attained, and German prisoners were going to the rear.

"No adjectives can give an idea of the infernal action of the artillery, which lasted three days. Hill 304, Dead Man Hill and Talou Ridge were ploughed up completely by our fire. The enemy was obliged to abandon his first line, but our attacking columns, with undiminished spirit, passed from trench to trench, reducing all living combatants to submission.

"Our aviators signaled our advance. It was tragic and overwhelming."

The French made their greatest advance on the right bank of the river north of Vacherauville. They occupied Talou Ridge, the town of Champneuville, Mormont farm, and Hills 344 and 240. Further to the east the Germans were driven out of parts of the Fosses and Chaume woods.

French aviators played a brilliant rôle in the fighting, flying low over the advancing troops and showering the Germans with machine-gun bullets. In addition they brought down eleven German airplanes on the Verdun front, while anti-aircraft guns destroyed two more.

Very severe counterattacks were launched by the Germans on the west bank of the Meuse, but they were all repulsed with heavy losses.

The text of the afternoon's statement follows:

> On both banks of the Meuse this morning our troops attacked the German positions with magnificent spirit. According to early information, the new battle of Verdun is developing to our advantage on a front of eighteen kilometers, from Avocourt Wood to the region north of Bezonvaux.
>
> Numerous prisoners are being taken to the rear. The bravery of our troops is beyond all praise.

The text of tonight's official statement reads:

> On the front north of Verdun our troops captured on both sides of the Meuse enemy defenses on a front of eighteen kilometers and to a depth which exceeded two kilometers at certain points. On the left bank of the river we hold in particular the Avocourt Wood, the two summits of Le Mort Homme, Corbeaux Wood, and Cumières Wood.
>
> On the right bank we have occupied Talou Ridge, Champneuville, Hill 344, Mormont Farm, and Hill 240, north of Louvemont. On the right our troops have advanced considerably in the Bois des Fosses and the Bois du Chaume.
>
> The number of unwounded prisoners taken is more than 4,000.
> The Germans carried out violent

counterattacks in the Avocourt Wood and against le Mort Homme and Hill 304, but our fire everywhere broke down their efforts and inflicted heavy losses.

Our aviators took a brilliant part in the battle, turning their machine guns at a low height against enemy concentrations and contributing also to the repulse of counterattacks. Our pilots brought down eleven German airplanes on the battle front, while two other enemy machines were brought down by our special guns.

SHELLING AT VERDUN SET NIGHT AFLAME

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY AT VERDUN, Aug. 20.—In the dim dawn of a morning of brilliant sunshine today the army of Verdun shook its giant limbs and started out from its trenches between Avocourt and Bezonvaux, a distance of 15 miles, and within a short time it had attained positions which constitute a marked improvement of this important front.

I have just come down from trenches further than Douamont, where I have been privileged to witness the commencement of what is certainly to be a hard and may be a protracted battle and, leaving till tomorrow its purely military aspects, will confine myself to recording the first impression of the most extraordinary spectacle I have ever seen, a spectacle of such wild and terrible splendor that no human pen can do full justice to it.

Emerging from the depths of the citadel into the gloomy streets of the now completely ruined city the whole sky above the encircling hills was lit up as though by flashes of an infinitely enlarged aurora borealis. As we climbed up the edge of the saucer in which Verdun lies and passed from one to another of the northern slopes, every one a famous battlefield, this illumination, losing something of the mystery that distance gives, assumed a more fearfully real quality.

At 3 A. M. it was pitch black night save for a great crescent before us where the earth seemed to be on fire, and in the intermediate hollows in which thousands of tongues of flame splashed out of the void and vanished, to give place to new thousands of momentary splashes. Stars of rocket signals and various shafts and glows of light crossed this riven chaos, and the vast amphitheatre of the Meuse heights rang and echoed with unceasing roar.

The uproar was almost exclusively from French batteries around and behind us. The German fire was apparently trivial by comparison. It was concentrated on the front more than a mile ahead and particularly on the Dead Man hill sector. In our advance the noise became literally deafening. When we gained a little relief by leaving the roads, which, of course, can only be used at night, for the trenches, the faint outline of the nearest hills began to appear, but all the valleys were sunk in thick gray mist across which lurid gleams broke perpetually.

The fated hour has nearly come. The guns have now been driven to the rapidity which the Germans call drumfire. The effect might rather be compared to the continuous explosions of hundreds of thousands of Chinese crackers. Every few minutes here or there on the wide semi-circle there rises a rosy cloud with an orange heart that implies the explosion of an ammunition store. Our watches tell us nothing else, for the guns never cease and the front trenches are lost under a fog. But a fifteen-mile wave of assault is breaking over the parapets and into the enemy lines. There is yet a quarter of an hour to daybreak, but a pale green tide is flooding up the eastern sky.

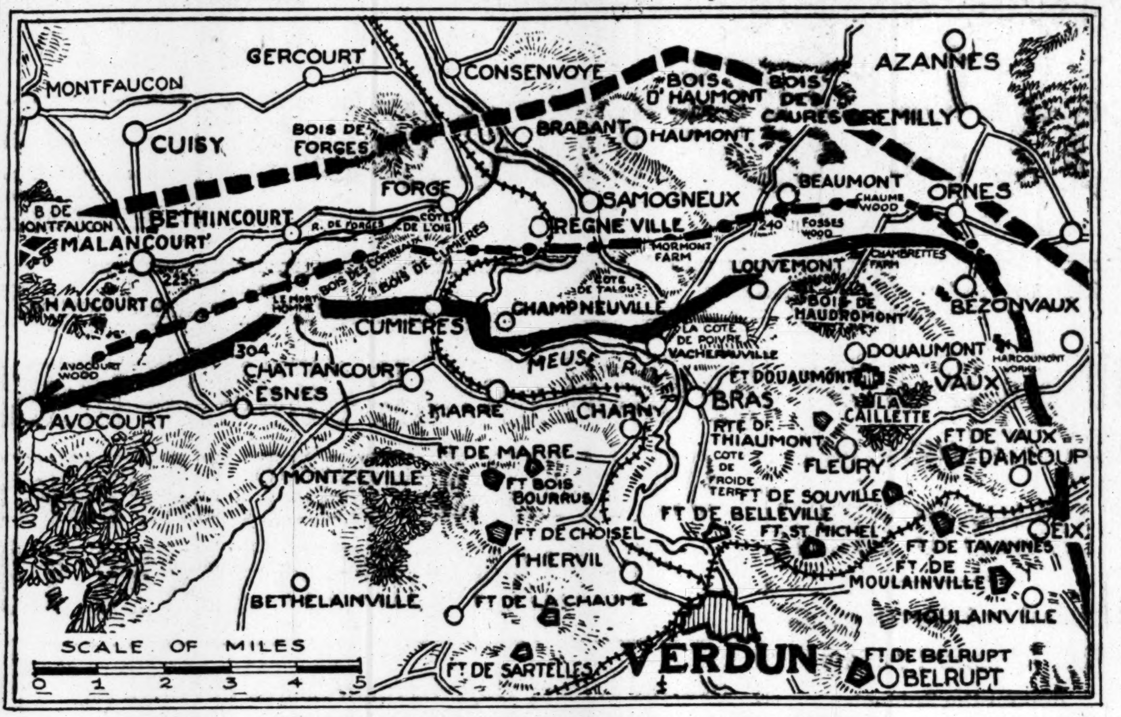
From a parapet of a sap, as far forward as it is safe to go, I look over the foul wilderness of yellow earth sparsely covered with sickly weeds, to the crests north of Louvemont and Bezonvaux. Balls and sprays and fountains of fire unceasingly mark the still invisible battlefield. A series of triple stars hanging for long seconds in mid-sky show that the Germans are calling for a barrage. Still the enemy fire does not reach us. No sooner was this unfortunate reflection made than I found myself on my face with a little cataract of earth falling around. It was time to go.

Won All Their Objectives.

By The Associated Press.

GRAND HEADQUARTERS OF THE FRENCH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 20.—When prisoners came back in hundreds shortly after dawn this morning the observers knew that the sharp blow decided on by the French higher command, in order to give more breathing space at Verdun, had been successful. After the artillery had pounded the German positions stretching along a front of fourteen miles, from south of Bethincourt to Bezonvaux, until they must have been like pulp, the infantry advanced as the first streak of dawn lighted the sky, and occupied all the positions they had set out to conquer, at the same time sweeping into their net many prisoners of several divisions of the German Crown Prince's army.

Scene of New French Victory at Verdun.



By a great attack on a front of over eleven miles, from Avocourt to Bezonvaux, the French yesterday pierced the German line to an extreme depth of one and a quarter miles, capturing Avocourt Wood, Le Mort Homme, the Corbeaux, and Camieres Woods, the Côte de Talon, Champneuville, Mormont farm, and Hill 240. Over 4,000 prisoners were taken.

The solid line on the map shows the French line before the attack, the dot and dash line the extent of the advance, while the broken line is where the French stood at the beginning of the great Verdun campaign on Feb. 21, 1916.

The French soldiers showed once more that they were not yet bled white. When the order was given for them to go over the top in the face of hundreds of batteries of heavy and light artillery and thousands of machine guns, they advanced singing, and nothing could stay their dash. They were handled in such a way by their officers that they escaped through the most dangerous part of the ground they had to negotiate with almost negligible losses, reaching the German positions before the German barrage fire.

The correspondent passed the night on the battlefield in the vicinity of the thickest artillery fire, and can testify to its intensity. During two famous French victories, on Oct. 24 and Dec. 15, 1916, before Verdun, the correspondent was present on both occasions, and this time reached the conclusion from the fierceness of the fire that the French employed at least an equal number of guns. The night preceding this battle was fairylike in beauty. There was no moon, but the stars were brilliant and the natural effects enhanced by the constant succession of flashes from bursting shells, while all along both French and German positions flares almost incessantly arose, making the surrounding area brighter than day.

The only disturbing sounds were the terrifying screeches and the whistling of smaller shells, and the train-like roar of larger projectiles as they tore through the air, while the dull thuds of trench torpedoes reverberated along the ground.

The French troops awaiting the order to advance were not in the slightest dismayed by the difficulties of the task confronting them. They knew that this was unsuitable terrain for attacking forces, but the fullest confidence reigned among them. Facing them were German divisions which had been massed for resistance to any effort the French might make to extend their circle of territory around Verdun, which the Germans call the door to the heart of France. The confidence of the French proved justified, for they not only pushed the German intruders back as far as they intended, but took many prisoners from chosen German regiments.

All through the night the German artillery had poured thousands of shells of every calibre into the roads and communicating trenches leading to the front. They introduced a novelty in the shape of 15-inch shells containing enormous shrapnel bullets, which burst overhead, scattering pieces far and wide. But the disposition of the French troops was so cleverly contrived that they suffered little.

Verdun itself received hundreds of shells, which simply added to the destruction in the city. All the ground within eight miles of the front lines was strewn repeatedly with shells containing a horrible new German gas know as "mustard gas," affecting the mucous membranes and any portion of the body which was exposed, causing terrible blisters, as its base was sulphuric acid, and bringing a slow and painful death if it entered the lungs.

The aviators were busy as soon as the light permitted, and the correspondent saw two Germans shot down by gunfire, while Germans who make a specialty of attacking observation balloons twice attempted to destroy these, but were driven off on each occasion.

Information comes from various parts of the line that the French have in several places gone further than was originally intended and that the prisoners taken number into the thousands.

BERLIN CALLS IT VICTORY.

Admits, However, Talou Ridge Was Abandoned and French Gained Ground.

BERLIN, Aug. 20, (via London.)—The War Office announces that the French, without fighting, have occupied the Talou Ridge, on the Verdun front, east of the Meuse. At all other places over a front of 14⅜ miles, the German General Staff reports, fighting is in full swing.

The German High Command says that Talou Ridge was given up by the Teutons because this line of defense since March had only been occupied by outposts. Sixteen Entente allied airplanes and four captive balloons, according to the statement, were brought down yesterday by the Germans.

Army Group of the German Crown Prince: A battle before Verdun commenced early this morning with strong French attacks on both banks of the Meuse, from Avocourt Wood to Caurières Wood.

The artillery duel continued without interruption and with the greatest intensity throughout the whole of yesterday and last night. This morning a strong drumfire preceded the infantry attack.

The French occupied, without fighting, Talou Ridge, east of the Meuse, which since March of this year had been given up as a line of defense, and had been occupied only by outposts. These were withdrawn yesterday in accordance with our plans and without disturbance from the enemy. At all other places on the wide battlefront fighting is in full swing.

This evening's statement follows:

The battle before Verdun is going in our favor. On the western bank of the Meuse the enemy only succeeded in penetrating our defensive zone at the Avocourt Wood and on Le Morte Homme. Elsewhere his repeated assaults were everywhere repulsed.

East of the Meuse the enemy was either completely repulsed before our fighting positions or driven back in counterattacks. The reckless bringing up of masses of infantry on a front of more than twenty kilometers against our strong fighting forces cost the French exceedingly heavy losses.

Sixteen enemy airplanes and four captive balloons were brought down yesterday.

BREAK UP GERMAN ATTACK.

British Artillery Shatters Projected Assault Near Epehy.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The British official communication issued this evening follows:

The enemy this morning endeavored to launch another counterattack against our new position north of Epéhy. His troops were observed as they were moving into position to assault and were dispersed by our artillery before the attack could develop.

Patrol encounters in which we made some progress took place throughout the day on the northwestern outskirts of Lens. A hostile raiding party entered our lines early this morning east of Armentières. Two of our men are missing.

Yesterday hostile aircraft worked in large formations well behind their own lines, and endeavored unsuccessfully to hinder the work of our bombing, photographic, and reconnoissance machines. Our bombing operations were continued. An enemy train was wrecked and much damage was caused to hostile airdromes, dumps, and stations. The work, in co-operation with our artillery, was carried out with good effect, and many photographs were taken.

In air fighting two German airplanes were downed, four others were driven out of control, and one other was shot down inside our lines by anti-aircraft guns. Six of our machines are missing.

The official statement issued this morning said that a German counterattack on the positions captured by the British yesterday morning southeast of Epehy was completely repulsed after sharp fighting.

A successful raid was carried out last night south of Lens. On the Ypres battlefront the British line has been advanced slightly southeast of Stjenshoek.

German military establishments in Belgium, which have been attacked repeatedly of late by British airplanes, were again raided on Saturday night, the Admiralty announces. The statement follows:

"Many tons of bombs were dropped on the night of August 18-19 by the Naval Air Service on the following military objectives: St. Pierre Station and sidings at Ghent; Thourout station and dump; Bruges docks.

"A raid was also carried out yesterday morning on the Snellegham airdrome, where a direct hit was made on a large shed.

"On their return our machines were attacked by hostile aircraft which were beaten off with the aid of a Royal Flying Corps patrol. One enemy machine was shot down out of control. All ours returned safely."

PARIS, Aug. 20.—The French official report concerning operations on fronts other than the Verdun sector, issued this afternoon, follows.

We made several raids and brought back prisoners from the enemy lines.

In the region of Badonviller we easily repulsed an enemy attack. There was rather spirited artillery fighting in Upper Alsace."

BERLIN, Aug. 20, (via London.)—Army Headquarters issued the following statement today on operations in Belgium and Northern France:

Army Group of Crown Prince Rupprecht—On the battlefield in Flanders after the failure of English early attacks south of Langemarck the artillery duel yesterday was considerably less intense than on the preceding days. In Artois the artillery activity was intense only to the north and west of Lens. English reconnoitring detachments were repeatedly repulsed.

GETTING CLOSER TO LENS.

Canadians Establish Posts in Last German Defense Line.

By Canadian Press, Ltd.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Aug. 20.—Northwest of Lens, admidst the trenches and railway cuttings which form the last line of German defense in that quarter, the Canadians have succeeded in establishing strong posts in a special trench which was the scene of desperate and indecisive fighting two days ago.

These new posts give command of the last bit of ground from which the defenders of the city could overlook the advance from the west. They are now in a hollow all around the front, which swings about Lens in semi-circular form. The eastern exits from the city are now subjected to a constant and harassing fire of the artillery and machine guns. This makes the bringing up of provisions and supplies of ammunition very difficult.

At 2 o'clock this morning a trench raid on the enemy's front northwest of Avion resulted in heavy fighting, in the course of which a considerable number of the enemy were killed in hand-to-hand fighting.

The Avion front was strongly held by the Germans as protection to Sall au Mines, a large mining village to the southeast of Lens, where many guns withdrawn from the German forward area to escape capture are now located.

German prisoners speak with bitterness of seeing their guns in process of withdrawal while the infantry was sent forward with insufficient artillery support. The loss of guns still appears to be more important in the eyes of the German commanders than the loss of men.

The enemy has been very active in the air recently, and has been bombing the British back areas more freely than for some time past.

LAST ATTACK IN DECEMBER.

French Then Captured 20,000 Prisoners and Much Important Terrain.

The present French thrust north of Verdun on both sides of the Meuse on a front of nearly, if not quite, twelve miles, still further consolidates the French strategic points, not only strengthening the left bank as a protection against Verdun but also improving the defenses on the right bank in their relation to the Plain of the Woevre—the Meuse-Moselle watershed.

Incidentally over 20 square miles are added to the total of 45 recovered from the maximum of 120 occupied by Germany a year ago on a 32-mile front of varying depths of penetration.

The French recovered Fort Douaumont on Oct. 24 and Fort Vaux on Nov. 1; then on Dec. 15, 16, 17, and 18 an offensive was developed from west of Vacherauville to just north of the town of Vaux, and as far north as Louvemont and the Bois des Caurières, which embraced Vacherauville, Louvemont, les Chambrettes, Bezonvaux, and Hardaumont and netted 20,000 prisoners.

This was said to be the last gift of General Nivelle to the Germans as commander of the armies at Verdun. On Dec. 12 he had been ordered to succeed Joffre as commander of the French armies in the field, a position he held until May 15, when the price he paid in men to secure a small advantage between St. Quentin and Soissons caused him to be succeeded by Pétain, the original defender of Verdun.

From the middle of December till July 1 little beyond local raids took place on the Verdun front; then the French began a steady artillery preparation including Avocourt Wood, Hill 304, and Dead Man Hill, and the other elevations on the left bank from which the Germans could command the French positions of Vacherauville, Côte du Poivre and Louvemont, with its hills 321, 344 and 347 on the right. In picking out the German emplacements and in silencing their guns this artillery preparation has been reported to be most effective.

Biggest Blast Furnaces in France, Built During War, Start Work.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Fires have just been started in the biggest blast furnaces in France, which have been planned and constructed during the war, near Caen, in the Department of Calvados, where German iron manufacturers began before the war to extend their holdings and were preparing to erect an iron and steel mill to utilize the iron and ore of this department.

M. Thomas, Minister of Armament, presided over the ceremony. The new establishment is the result of efforts on the part of Eugene Schneider of the Creusot Works, and will bring an important addition to French resources in pig iron

REICHSTAG MAJORITY BACKS POPE'S MOVE

WANTS 'GREEN-TABLE' TALK

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 20, (via London.)—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent had a conversation with the Socialist leader, Dr. Albert Suedekum, at his home in Zehlendorf yesterday, in which Dr. Suedekum left no doubt that the members of the Reichstag majority, which was responsible for passing the peace resolution July 19, consisting of Socialists, Progressives, and Centrists, were unanimously of the opinion that the German Government ought to make a favorable reply to the Pope's peace message and that this majority would, of course, extend its influence in that direction.

Dr. Suedekum, who is temporarily Chairman of the Reichstag Main Committee, at whose meeting on Tuesday Chancellor Michaelis will speak on the Pope's message, said he believed the German Government had already made up its mind to stand by the Chancellor's declaration in the Reichstag that he was ready to indorse the peace resolution of the majority, which Dr. Suedekum thought had paved the way for the Pope's message, if only incidentally. The Socialists also had, he said, the satisfaction that the Reichstag resolution, the Pope's message, and the Stockholm program rested on almost identical fundamental principles.

Offended at Stockholm Rebuff.

"Will German Socialists go to Stockholm even if the Entente nations persist in preventing their Socialists from participating in the international conference?" THE TIMES correspondent asked.

"We German Socialists," replied Dr. Suedekum, "certainly will go in all circumstances, because we know we will come to an understanding with the Russians somehow, and our position with neutral Socialists will be much improved if the Entente Socialists will not or can not come."

He added with some little vindictiveness: "It is a monstrosity on the part of the Entente and even more so on America's part to prohibit their Socialists from expressing in a merely theoretical discussion the opinions held by many of their citizens. This prohibition is characteristic of their Government's conception of free speech and liberty generally of which they boast so much and for the sake of which, besides other hollow pretensions, they profess to have gone to war."

Opposes Telling Full War Aims.

Dr Suedekum was asked if he thought Germany would now give her detailed war aims as the Entente press demanded. He would not say what the Government would do, but thought the Reichstag resolution clearly said as much about German war aims as was desirable before the nation's peacemakers sat down at a green table.

"In fact," he said, "our Reichstag resolution leaves only matters of secondary importance to be settled. These do not include the punishment of certain nations for wilful and criminal assaut on Germany for the simple reason that such punishment will not right any wrong done. But I can assure you that Dictator Wilson's action will be fully discussed at the Stockholm conference. The neutrals will see to that. However, I have no right to speak for them."

"If Kerensky is against Stockholm, will not that prevent Russian participation"? I asked.

Dr. Suedekum wished me to understand that Kerensky was not the whole Social Democratic Party of Russia. He concluded by saying that hope was dawning all over the world, and that even the "privileged classes" began to see that with peace a new and better world must and would come, no matter what forces might still try to resist. The German Socialist Party, he insisted, would permit neither the Entente nor America to meddle with German family affairs.

Attribute Hope to Erzberger.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—A dispatch from Amsterdam quotes an article in the National-Zeitung of Berlin, signed "Center," who, in all probability, is Mathias Erzberger. He says the result of sounding the various Governments by the Vatican before the delivery of the peace note has given strong ground for the belief that the action taken by the Pope will lead to something substantial.

"Center" asserts that the Vatican took careful steps through its representatives to obtain a clear view of the real war aims of the Governments, and the writer says that the belief arrived at by Rome was that the Pope's intervention would not be unwelcome to any Government in question.

Here the writer appears to be thinking more especially of the Entente Governments, and he derives great hope of success from the fact that the British representative at the Vatican undertook, upon instructions from London, the forwarding of the note to the Entente Governments, which he thinks would not have been done if the Vatican's action had been regarded unfavorably by Great Britain.

CALL COALITION CONFERENCE.

Discussion of Pope's Plan by Reichstag Majority Indicated.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 19, (via London, Aug. 20.)—Members of the Reichstag majority—the Catholic Centre, the Radicals, and the Socialists—arranged on Sunday a confidential meeting for Monday afternoon, doubtless with the object of discussing the Pope's peace proposals.

It is significant that, although the National Liberals voted against the original peace resolution in July, they have been especially invited to attend the majority meeting. They will hold their own meeting to decide whether to accept the invitation.

In view of the failure of Austro-German attempts to secure peace on tolerable terms before Winter, either via Stockholm or Rome, it seems to be expected that even the majority parties will now abandon their July program.

The Vossische Zeitung, in a telegram from Zurich, admits that the Neue Zürcher Nachrichten, which is one of Germany's famous propagandist papers, is in close touch with the Vatican. This clearly indicates one connecting link.

A Berne dispatch to the same paper states that the economic discussion between Switzerland and the Entente in Paris has been broken off, due especially to great difficulties put by America in the way of Swiss imports and exports. It says the Swiss Government was compelled to recall its three negotiators from Paris.

LLOYD GEORGE PUT CRITICS TO FLIGHT

ATTACKS WERE SEVERE

By Skillful Presentation of the Case Against Germany He Centred Attention on the Main Issue.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

LONDON, July 22.—It looked this morning as if we were going to have a show under conditions favorable for seeing it from a bay window in Hanover Square. The Sunday morning bath was in progress when sound of the firing gave warning of approaching hostile aircraft. A look out of the window showed a slight increase in the Sunday morning activity, that is to say instead of three or four people, eight or ten were moving about in the few squares visible from my vantage point. A policeman strolled along wearing his sandwich, on both sides of which were placarded:

POLICE NOTICE.
TAKE COVER.

Here and there in an upstairs window appeared a head, otherwise the normal week-end quiet prevailed in Oxford Street. From within my flat I heard a peevish exclamation: "Those Huns might wait till after breakfast to do their raiding." In the course of about ten minutes the firing stopped. Two or three small groups could be seen along the ten Oxford Street blocks between Selfridge's on the west and Waring & Gillow's on the east. That was the end of the Sunday morning raid so far as London was concerned. Of course, the airplanes got no further inland than Harwich and Felixstowe. So far as I had a chance to inquire before going to the country, people in Central London felt rather cheated at not having their show. I believe that in the poorer parts there is considerable fear and anxiety about air raids, but this feeling does not prevail at all among those with whom I come into contact. Personally I must say that while I did not want anyone killed I shared the general disappointment at not seeing a repetition of the wondrous spectacle of three weeks ago.

The change from day to day in the political feeling is an interesting study. Last Friday it looked as if the Lloyd George Government was trembling in the balance. Saturday morning one sensed a slightly more favorable feeling toward the Government. By Sunday morning all danger of serious trouble appeared to have passed. I spent the day in the same house with some prominent politicians who are connected with the administration, and found them confident of standing successfully against any opposition that might develop in the House of Commons this week.

Britain is a great deal changed in the last few years in respect to its temperament and its methods for making it manifest. Its nerves are much closer to the surface than they used to be. In the last few days the public mood has shown a mercurial quality not usually associated with the idea of British phlegm.

Two or three things have brought about the change from storm to calm. The enemies of the Government were somewhat too strenuous and overdid the thing. The attacks on Churchill were so extreme that they reacted on the men and newspapers making them.

The principal cause for betterment in the situation, however, is to be found in the Prime Minister's speech at the Queen's Hall and Winston Churchill's at Dundee. Mr. Lloyd George is quite the most effective speaker that I know of, as well as the most skillful politician. He strode right up to the lion in the way, and apparently put him to flight with his walking cane. Englishmen differ most unamiably in regard to food legislation, the merits of Churchill and Montagu, the proper method of dealing with the Mesopotamia scandal and the Irish question; they are practically a unit, however, in their hatred of the German, and that was the subject chosen by the Prime Minister and presented with that consummate mastery which always carries the public with him. When he got through hanging Dr. Michaelis's hide on the fence there was only one feeling in the audience—hate and defiance of the Hun and unity under Lloyd George's leadership—and the same thing was true the next morning of the greater audience of the British public.

EDISON WITH DANIELS VISITS WHITE HOUSE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Thomas A. Edison, escorted by Secretary Daniels, went to the White House to see President Wilson at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Daniels said that for several months Mr. Edison had devoted himself exclusively to experimentation in the interest of America at war, but he would make no other comment on the purpose or occasion of the visit to the President.

Mr. Edison has not been in Washington for months, having scarcely left his laboratory and his home, and it is suggested that he has invented an epoch-making device for use against the submarine. It is understood that his aims have been to develop a weapon of offense possessing also defensive value. It is thought improbable that the world will be informed of any invention by him until after it has actually been put in use.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 20.—Thomas A. Edison is in Washington today, where, after a conference with Secretary Daniels, he called on President Wilson. It was his first visit to the President since the declaration of war.

Whether his visit had to do with any recent invention could not be learned at the West Orange laboratories, where it was said that he was in Washington on official business.

Mr. Edison has been working from sixteen to eighteen hours a day in his laboratory since the declaration of war, his name having been recently connected with a contrivance to defeat German submarines.

Urgent Call for Camp Cooks.

With but a few days left in which to obtain civilian cooks needed for the Yaphank Cantonment, the skilled cooks of this city will have to respond in large numbers if the New York hotel men are to make good their pledge to the U. S. A. Quartermaster Department. Lucius M. Boomer, Chairman of the committee having the matter in charge, has issued an urgent call to all hotel and restaurant proprietors to send their cooks for the six or eight weeks necessary to instruct the enlisted army cooks in their work. At the Hotel Men's Association, Thirty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, where applications are being received and slight tests of the fitness of the men made by the committee, there is a steady stream of high-class men arriving each day to offer their services. All and more can be used, however.

In certain circles here where the military situation is well understood the belief prevails that the German General Staff has come to the conclusion that the Central Powers are engaged in a hopeless struggle from which they cannot emerge without complete vanquishment unless the war ends within a comparatively short period. The length of this period would be only a matter of guesswork outside of the inner official circle at Berlin, as it is dependent on the quantity of supplies on hand and in prospect, and the ability of the empire to furnish men to fill up the depleted ranks of the German armies.

Even in the inner Berlin circle the time that Germany will be able to hold out cannot be forecast with certainty for the reason that it is dependent on the harvest and the ability of Germany to obtain needed military supplies which, it is strongly suspected, she has been importing from nearby neutral countries, which have been securing them from the United States. The new embargo policy of the United States is bound to curtail this trade and as a result the General Staff will be kept guessing.

Expect Three More War Years.

Among military men here there is some variance of opinion as to how long the war will last, but generally it may be said that they are inclined to the belief that it is well to figure on three more years of fighting. At the same time it is admitted that there may be an ending of hostilities at the end of 1918. Nobody whose judgment on military matters is regarded as of value inclines to a rather popular view among laymen in Washington, as well as outside, that peace will come with the beginning of cold weather this year. The best informed think that Germany will fight on in the face of knowledge by her rulers that she is already whipped and will give the Allies at least one more year of combat.

Perhaps the most significant thing in the war situation from the Washington viewpoint is the change of opinion among military observers as to the situation. Most of them had taken the rather gloomy view that, while Germany could never win the war, her position was such that tremendous sacrifices would have to be made by the Allies, including the United States, before anything approaching victory could be achieved. Even now there is no admission that great sacrifices are not necessary, but it appears to be the fact that military men have become convinced that Germany is "on the run" and knows it.

When the German people will realize this and begin to take an active part in the situation is problematical, but it is accepted here that sooner or later they will understand that their faith in the superhuman qualities of their rulers has been misplaced, and that they will then make themselves felt as a power to be reckoned with.

This view of the situation does not take into account conditions in the Austro-Hungarian Empire. It is fully understood in the capitals of the nations at war with the Teutonic Powers that Emperor Charles is fearful of losing his new crown, and that he and his advisers are anxious to find a means of getting out of the conflict on the best terms obtainable. To this feeling is attributed the frequent visits of German statesmen to Vienna recently.

Conferences with Japanese.

An indication of the American attitude on peace was furnished today, when it was learned authoritatively at the State Department that the Japanese mission and this Government's representatives will discuss how best to act together to assist in the advancement of the war. No program of subjects for the conferences has been prepared, and the United States will not take the initiative in introducing for consideration any matter that is not related directly to the better prosecution of the war.

The Mission, which is due in Washington at a very early date, will spend several days in formalities and social functions before taking up serious business. Originally Japan's intention was for the Mission to welcome in Japan's name the United States as an associate in the war, but there is a disposition both in Japan and in the United States to take advantage of the occasion to collaborate on war measures the better to speed the day of Germany's defeat.

It is still believed in some quarters that some of the most effective ways open to Japan to aid the advancement of the war is to supply tonnage for the use of the allied nations.

Lloyd George Speech Recalled.

There was recalled today the declarations concerning peace made by British Prime Minister Lloyd George in Glasgow on June 29. There is some reason to believe that the British Government was advised a considerable time ago of the Vatican's intention of addressing the belligerents and that Mr. Lloyd George took occasion after obtaining this information to make one of his most important and significant speeches relating to peace. He said:

"In my judgment the war will end when the Allies reach the end they set out to attain when they accepted the German challenge to civilization. If it ends a single hour before it will be the greatest disaster that ever befell mankind. I hear people say that Germany is ready to give us a satisfactory peace. Undoubtedly you can have peace now at a certain price, for undoubtedly Germany wants peace, but it is a peace that would give her economic and other control over the countries she has invaded."

There was an intimation in a high Entente quarter today that the probable collective reply of the allied nations to Pope Benedict's proposal would be a substantial reiteration of their answer to President Wilson's peace note of Dec. 19. That reply stated that the details of the Entente's peace terms would not be made known until the hour of the negotiations.

The allied powers in their reply on Dec. 30 to the peace overtures of the Central Powers and their allies said:

"Once again the Allies declare that no peace is possible so long as they have not secured reparation of violated rights and liberties, recognition of the principle of nationalities, and of the free existence of small States; so long as they have not brought about a settlement calculated to end once and for all, causes which have so long threatened the nations, and to afford the only effective guarantees for the future security of the world."

ALLIES TO CONFER, SAYS CECIL.

Announcement in Commons on Step for Replying to Pope.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade and Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Entente allied Governments would hold a conference before a reply to the Pope's peace proposal would be sent to the Vatican.

VATICAN SEES BENEFIT IN DISCUSSION OF NOTE

Especially Interested in the Reply of America to Pope's Proposals.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Aug. 20.—The Vatican expected opposition by a majority of the press to the Pope's peace proposals, and had looked for it to be even more violent. One of the highest personages there said to your correspondent:

"One of the perquisites of a peacemaker is dissatisfaction by both the parties whom he is trying to bring together. Recall President Wilson's first message proposing peace without victory. Attacks made on it were rude and insulting, criticism being pushed to the extreme limits permitted by international etiquette.

"Still, even that document had its effect. It changed some intransigeant viewpoints, which were modified again by Wilson's last message.

"The Pope had no intention of outlining definite conditions of peace, but wished to demonstrate to both groups of belligerents the uselessness of continuing the war. For both sides this can be studied more profitably through discussion."

The Vatican does not conceal the fact that one of the answers from belligerent Governments, which is awaited with the greatest interest and anxiety, is that of America. When the Pope compiled his note, it is said here, he sought to embody in it the larger part of the program for peace and readjustment of the world proposed by President Wilson.

"How is it possible," Vatican officials ask, "that President Wilson should not approve disarmament, the court of arbitration, and the freedom of the seas, which constitute the fundamental basis of his own program, besides the complete restoration of independence to Belgium, the resurrection of the Kingdom of Poland, and a just solution of the problems of Alsace-Lorraine, Trent, Trieste, the Balkans, and Armenia."

Either the conditions proposed by the Pope must be considerably changed or there is no hope from his plan, is the general tone of comment in the Italian press.

"What we need," said en ex-Minister, "is real restoration, without which it is impossible to secure a just and lasting peace. This cannot be obtained without the defeat of the Central Empires, either by force of arms or diplomacy. Is Germany ready to admit defeat and submit to the consequences? If not, the war must continue until all the forces of the great democratic American Republic, joining those of the other allies, decide the fate of Europe and the liberty of the world. If the Papal plan remains as first published, it would be a good document to entitle the Pope to be admitted to the future peace conference, but nothing else."

It is considered evident here that Germany is not ready to return Alsace-Lorraine to France nor is Austria willing to cede Trieste to Italy. Without examining other important questions, this is held to be sufficient to demonstrate that peace made on such a basis would not be just, much less lasting, as it would leave unsolved the very problems which have accumulated throughout the years, such a volume of resentment and hatred as to render war inevitable.

BELGIANS OPPOSE PEACE NOW.

Assert Liberty and Justice Will Come Only After Fight to End.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—Members of the Belgian War Mission to the United States, who were guests of the city, today voiced their opposition to the Pope's peace plan, and intimated that the plea for a cessation of the war had its inspiration in Berlin. The party included Baron Moncheur, General Le Clercq, Hector Carlier, Major Osterrieth, and Count Louis d'Ursel.

"We must fight on," said General Le Clercq, who is a veteran of Liége. "We must not lay down our arms for one instant because of peace talk.

"German militarism would enslave the world. We shall have justice, independence, liberty, and enduring peace after a little while. But these aims are not possible by arbitration. We shall gain them only by fighting to the end."

The envoys who arrived here from Washington visited Independence Hall after a luncheon at the Bellevue-Stratford, attended by Mayor Smith and several hundred of the city's leading citizens. Later they visited the Philadelphia Navy Yard and other places of interest, after which they received a reception at the Belgian Relief Headquarters. In the evening they were the guests of honor at a dinner in the Manufacturers' Club, and left later for New York.

OWEN WOULD CURB TEUTONS.

Proposes International Government to Police the World.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Senator Owen of Oklahoma offered a resolution in the Senate today calling upon the Allies to inaugurate an "international Government," to do away with the Teutonic autocracy, to the end that war may be abolished. The resolution contemplates an international force to replace the armaments of the "Teutonic military conspiracy." This force would police the world as against Prussian aggression.

The Oklahoma Senator urges for each country the right to self-government, freedom of the seas, and an international council to frame laws to guarantee the future safety of the world against warfare. The international council, he intends, would be organized according to the population of the countries involved.

Senator Owen would allow Germany and Austria in the international council only if they acted in accordance with the established rules of the council. The resolution seeks to have Congress go on record as of the opinion that "no reliance should be placed upon the vague suggestions of peace by the Teutonic military autocracy, but that their obscure proposals should be rated as a military ruse."

"The peace resolutions of the Reichstag, while promising well for the German people when they achieve self-government," says the resolution, "cannot at present be regarded as proposals binding or capable of enforcement by the German people, because they do not control their Government, but are mere subjects and puppets of a military autocracy whose dream is to conquer the world by military force and terrorism. The United States and the nations opposing militarism should strenuously prosecute the war with every available resource, and no separate peace should be made by any of them until the military autocracy of Germany is removed."

No annexation of territory or ordinary indemnities are sanctioned in the resolution, but a free Poland and restoration and indemnity for Belgium and Serbia are advocated.

BISHOP BLESSES REGIMENT

VETERANS ESCORT THEM

As Boat Sails Troops Sing "Farewell America—Hello, France"—Arrival at Mineola.

The men of the famous old "Fighting Sixty-ninth" Regiment of the New York National Guard, now known as the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Infantry of the new National Army and who it is expected will be the first of the New York Militia to see service in France, moved to their temporary camp yesterday at Mineola, L. I. Their departure from the armory at Twenty-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue began with a parade of two miles and a half in Fifth Avenue and other streets, with sidewalks crowded to the curbs with cheering throngs.

Throughout the short march this demonstration of patriotism and of friendship, by which men, women, and children sought by every means to make known to the departing soldiers their affectionate regard and good wishes, brought close to the hearts of the people and the khaki-clad men the realities of the war. Many of the women in the crowds were in tears. It was the first time that the public has had the opportunity to express its emotions and sympathy for war-bound troops, and it encouraged the men mightily

The Sixty-ninth showed more men in line yesterday than any regiment of infantry ever before seen in New York streets. It included approximately 2,100 men and ninety-five officers. One company had preceded it to camp. With additional drafts from the Seventy-first, Twenty-third, Twelfth and Fourteenth Regiments, which will join the new 165th at camp, the European war strength will be 3,700 men and officers.

All the men who could be spared from duty at the armory had liberty all Sunday night. After final farewell and parting with friends and relatives the soldiers reported to the armory at 8 o'clock for roll call. Not a man was absent. Breakfast was served in the armory, and at 8:45 o'clock the troops assembled on the drill floor, each man carrying his equipment, ready for the march at 9 o'clock.

The Right Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, Auxiliary Bishop of the Diocese of New York, appeared on the gallery, and blessed the regiment, and concluded with "God bless you, and good luck." A half hour later a bugle brought the men from "rest" to attention, and Lieut. Col. Latham Reed and his staff waited for the escort of Veteran Corps and the Spanish War Veterans of the Sixty-ninth to take up positions in Twenty-sixth Street.

Crowds had jammed Lexington Avenue in the meantime, and police reserves had to clear a path for the soldiers. Then John Mullens, drum major, whose father, the present armorer, carried the baton in the Spanish War, led the band to the street, amid cheers and shouts of "Here they come." "Hail, hail, the gang's all here," began the band. The tune changed to "Garry Owen," when the troops had formed in column of companies, with the senior company, M, commanded by Captain William Doyle, at the head.

Proudly Holds Battle Standard.

When the old battle standard bearing aloft the Stars and Stripes was seen by the throngs as it was borne along by Company F in the right centre of the regiment there were cheers that could be heard for blocks. Sergeant O'Shea was the proud standard bearer, for on the staff he held were the nickel battle rings testifying to the former deeds of the regiment. These circular pieces of metal covered the staff from tip to bottom and glistened with renewed brilliancy in the morning sun.

Major William J. Donovan of Buffalo, formerly Adjutant of the First Brigade and recently promoted and assigned to the Sixty-ninth, arrived in time to take command of his battalion, but he waived the honor and permitted Captain Thomas T. Reilly to continue in command throughout the parade. Colonel Charles De Lano Hine, the new commander of the Sixty-ninth, was at Mineola. He gave to Lieut. Col. Reed the honor of leading the regiment on the first leg of the journey to France.

A few minutes before Lieut. Col. Reed gave the order to march the company officers repeated to the men the announcement that a greeting to the regiment had been received from Colonel Delanzier, commander of the Sixty-ninth Regiment of the French Army. The French officer cabled this message to Lieut. Col. Reed.

"French comrades, officers and soldiers of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, very much touched by your congratulations, send their heartiest thanks to the officers and soldiers of the Sixty-ninth, New York Regiment. They are certain that from the common effort will arise the decisive victory."

The message was in response to one sent by Lieut. Col. Reed some days ago. Lieut. Col. Reed also had it announced to the regiment that he had recommended to the War Department the name of Private Martin J. Mead for a special award of merit for heroic and human service in rescuing an unknown child from the East River, at the foot of Forty-seventh Street on Aug. 2.

Last Farewell in Streets.

Among the throngs in front of the armory and along Twenty-seventh Street were most of the relatives of the soldiers. There were many weeping women and children, and despite the efforts of the police some of them rushed to the street and seized the sleeves of the passing soldiers. Here Father Francis J. Duffy, the regimental chaplain, encouraged the ones left behind. Stepping frequently from his place in the ranks and speaking encouragingly to many of the weeping women, he told them they would have another chance to see their relatives at camp.

To these affectionate demonstrations the soldiers returned no recognition, hard as the task may have been to each of them, but with eyes straight ahead they swung along through Twenty-seventh Street to Fifth Avenue with firm and steady tread. Everywhere the crowds waved flags, in which the red, white and blue were mingled with the green. From the tops of buildings and from windows Fifth Avenue paid its tribute to the soldiers with decorations and thousands of fluttering colors. Every window, doorstep, and each foot of the sidewalk held the reviewing throngs.

The men moved up the avenue to the Irish airs from the industrious band, which included "Erin Go Bragh," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," and the swinging march of "The Harp that Once Through Tara's Hall."

There was not an official reviewing stand. At the New York Public Library at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street Colonel Willard C. Fisk, Commander of the Seventh Regiment, who has 300 of his "boys" in the new quota of the Sixty-ninth, stood on the steps and smiled approval at the soldierly bearing of the men and waved a farewell. With him were Lieut. Col. Harry Sternberger, Chief Quartermaster of the Twenty-seventh Division; Mayor Mitchel, and Justice Victor J. Dowling and John D. Crimmins.

With every step the crowds seemed to increase. Above Forty-second Street the police had difficulty again in making way for the troops to turn east in Forty-fifth Street, thence to Madison Avenue, and down that thoroughfare to Thirty-fourth Street ferry. The Veteran Escort, under command of Colonel Edward Duffy, broke ranks and divided on each side of the street at Second Avenue, standing at attention as the regiment marched through to the boat.

"Farewell America, Hello France."

Some of the friends and relatives would not heed police or soldier guards, but crowded with the troops to the boat. While the men were getting aboard the band played "Wearing o' the Green," "I Want to See Old Ireland Free Once More," and everybody laughed and cheered when there followed the lively air of "Put Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag." The hard-working band concluded with "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

As the ferryboat William J. Gaynor moved from the pier a group of the soldiers lined the stern rail and sang: "Good-bye, Old New York, Farewell America, Hello France."

At Long Island City the soldiers were welcomed by other large crowds, who lingered around the Long Island Railroad terminal until the train departed. The trip to Mineola was made in a train of four sections of ten cars each. The factory whistles sounded a loud salute as each section moved out.

The men detrained at Hempstead Crossing, a mile from the camp, where Colonel Hine awaited them. Lieut. Col. Reed led the men on the march to camp and then Colonel Hine took command. Everything had been done to make the men comfortable on their first day in camp. All tents were up, cook shacks erected and all personal baggage delivered.

In the afternoon Colonel Hine, at a meeting of the officers, announced that the regimental policies would be adhered to. He congratulated Lieut. Col. Reed in getting the regiment to war strength and praised the personnel of the regiment.

A detail of 250, under command of Major T. J. Moynahan and Captain J. J. Mangin, left the troops at the ferry and returned to the Armory, where they will be engaged until tomorrow in getting the remainder of the stores and equipment to camp.

M'GRAW AND 'MATTY' SUMMONED TO COURT

Magistrate Frothingham, in Washington Heights Court yesterday, issued summonses for the appearance in court today of Christie Mathewson, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, and of John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants. The summonses were issued after they had been asked for by Detective McGovern of Inspector Ryan's staff, who told the Magistrate that there had been a violation of the Sunday law in his opinion when the two National League baseball teams played a game Sunday, following a concert announced as a benefit for the families of the men of the Sixty-ninth New York infantry.

McGovern was assigned to watch the game after protests against it being played had been sent to Inspector Ryan. McGovern said that the game was a regular game on the schedule of the National League and that its results had been set down as a part of the yearly contest of the league. He said Section 2145 of the Penal Code had been violated.

A summons was also asked for Charley Herzog, Captain of the Giants, but was denied.

GEN. PETAIN VISITS AMERICAN CAMP

With Gen. Pershing, He Inspects Men Training and Reviews French Chasseurs.

PRAISES OUR SOLDIERS

French Commander Particularly Interested in the Broad-Brimmed Campaign Hat.

By The Associated Press.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Aug. 19—(Delayed).—General Petain, Commander-in-Chief of the French Armies, paid his first visit today to the American troops in France, and expressed himself as delighted with what he saw.

"I am exceedingly pleased and gratified with what I have seen during this inspection," he said. "Training has progressed so well that I feel certain the American troops will form an excellent fighting force in a very short time."

The French General was accompanied by Major General John J. Pershing, the American commander, and both left this afternoon for the French front, where they will remain for several days. They had a very busy day, motoring a hundred miles or more and inspecting almost every village in which Americans are billeted. In addition, General Petain held a review of the famous chasseur division, which has been training the Americans for the past month.

Addressing the officers of this division General Pétain said they had rendered a notable service both to France and America and that their battalions had become sister battalions to the American contingent. The Americans, he added, have expressed the hope that some day they would have the privilege of fighting alongside their French instructors and of proving what apt pupils they can be.

General Pétain spoke of the élan of the chasseurs, of the high morale of the French army they represented and recalled to them that their duty was always to inculcate this morale in their fellow divisions.

Pershing Pleased With Men.

Major Gen. Pershing also was much pleased with his inspection of the American troops. He noted material improvements everywhere and said:

"I am extremely well satisfied with what I have seen today. A thing which particularly strikes one about the Americans is the fine spirit which prevails, both among the officers and men. Training is progressing rapidly and satisfactorily in every respect."

The review of the chasseur division was most spectacular. General Pershing greatly admired the dash with which it was carried out. The infantrymen made a splendid showing, but the picturesque feature was the rushing by of the divisional artillery, with horses at a fast trot, followed at some distance by several troops of cavalry at full gallop. Later three of the chasseur bands played "The Marseillaise" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The day was one of brilliant sunshine, and during the greater part of the review a beautiful silver-colored French airplane played above the heads of the soldiers. The French plane was viewed with some misgiving by the American anti-aircraft gunners while it was some distance away and before the identity of the aircraft was fully established. There were several German airplanes near the camp late yesterday, and it is reported that French airmen brought one of them down while it was endeavoring to return home.

Prior to the review General Pétain bestowed numerous decorations on the chasseurs, and also mingled with the French peasants who had gathered on the review grounds. Patting one small boy on the head, General Pétain asked him to what military class he belonged.

"Nineteen twenty-three, my General," the boy replied.

"Then you will have a long time to wait," laughed the General, and the boy saluted bravely.

Several times during the day the French commander received bouquets from little girls, each one of whom he kissed on either cheek. Late in the day General Pershing also received a bouquet, and, adopting the French custom, leaned far over and kissed the little girl on both her rosy cheeks and thanked her first in English and then in French.

Petain Inspects American Equipment.

General Pétain made a close inspection of several of the American battalions, and seemed particularly interested in the various items of their equipment. He stopped in front of a number of the soldiers, and examined their kits in detail. The broad-brimmed American campaign hats also claimed a great deal of his attention. He took one of these from a soldier's head, weighed it in his hands, and studied it for several minutes, and then carefully replaced and adjusted it on the soldier's head, the latter standing at rigid attention the whole time.

"This is very good, very good," said the General. "It is especially fine for such a sun as we have today."

"And for rain, too," added General Pershing.

"They are fine young men, of splendid physique, intelligent, and most satisfactory looking soldiers in every way," General Pétain told several of the Captains of companies, who repeated his words to their commands when the General had passed on his way.

CONSTANTINE'S REASON FOR GREEK NEUTRALITY

Wrote the Kaiser He Could Be Most Useful to Him in That Way, Letter Reveals.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—An Athens dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that among the diplomatic documents found in Athens since the change in Government is a dispatch of former King Constantine, written a few days after the war began in response to a message from Emperor William, who proposed that Greece should range herself on the side of the Central Powers. Constantine said in his reply:

"The Emperor well knows that my personal sympathies, as well as my political opinions, attract me to his side. Nevertheless, it is impossible for me to understand in what manner I could be useful to him in mobilizing my army. The Mediterranean is at the mercy of the united fleets of England and France, which could destroy our navy and merchant marine, occupy our islands and, above all, prevent concentration of my army, which could be effected only by sea, in the absence of railway communications. Without it being in our power to be useful in any particular, we would be wiped off the map. I am necessarily of the opinion that neutrality is imposed upon us."

Gottlieb von Jagow, then German Foreign Secretary, replied to Constantine that Emperor William would understand the necessity of maintaining neutrality for the present. He advised Constantine to reach an understanding with Sofia and Constantinople.

MAY AVERT RAILWAY STRIKE

Negotiations Proceeding to Prevent British Labor Trouble.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Although the matter is still unsettled, the general belief late tonight was that a strike of the railway men has been averted.

After a meeting this evening the Executive Secretary of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, Mr. Bromley, said that certain events had taken place during the day, making possible further negotiations between the society and the Board of Trade, and leading to the belief that a way might be found out of the impasse by the society obtaining certain written assurances.

Another member of the Executive Committee said that another intermediary had taken up the dispute and had exercised considerable influence. In view of the new developments members of the Executive Committee will remain in London Tuesday instead of proceeding to their homes.

DENIES U-BOAT RUMORS.

Daniels Has No Word That Germany Is Sending Submarines Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Secretary Daniels denied today the statement printed in a New York newspaper that the Navy Department had received a report of a movement of German submarines or their presence in American waters. Naval experts here do not believe Germany will so weaken her undersea forces when she may employ them to greater advantage in European waters.

The only consideration which would move Germany to send U-boats to the United States, it was asserted, would be the appeal to the spectacular and the sensational, which would hardly be sufficient to dictate such a radical change in her naval policy.

FAILS TO SAVE HER SON.

Mother Nearly Drowns Struggling with Boys in Swift Creek.

In a vain attempt to save her 11-year-old son and his friend from drowning in Pugsley Creek, Westchester, yesterday, Mrs. Katharine Fairbrother of 1,872 McGraw Avenue, Westchester, almost lost her own life. She is in the Fordham Hospital in a serious condition, while the bodies of her son, Robert, and his playmate, William Farrell, 13 years old, of 1,872 East 177th Street, the Bronx, were recovered by the police after several hours' work.

The boys were playing ball near the creek when William, running backward to catch a fly, fell into the water. The eddies of the creek caught him, and he went down. Robert ran to the bank and jumped into the stream in an attempt to save the life of his playmate, but he was also helpless in the swift water. Mrs. Fairbrother had seen the two boys disappear and she also jumped in. She seized both of them, but was unable to bring the struggling boys to the bank. She was unconscious when two men pulled her from the stream.

SUGAR CONTROL NOW PLANNED BY HOOVER

Coffee and Sugar Exchange Delegation Finds He Has Very Decided Opinions.

SUPPLY FOR ARMY ASSURED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Members of a committee named by the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange met here today with Herbert C. Hoover, Food Administrator, and, it is reported, found that he had very decided opinions about prices for producer and consumer, and the subject of control.

Mr. Hoover didn't say much, but he made it evident that he believed the sugar market should be stabilized, and that he was in favor of drastic control along the lines adopted in connection with wheat if the situation warranted. He heard what the committee had to say, and then arranged for further negotiations.

It can be said that in the eyes of the food administration the sugar situation presents a problem of no little importance, and there is a strong feeling that conditions which have been permitted to exist up to this time were unwarranted even by the unusual wartime conditions. The food administration, it was reported today, plans to take over supervision of the sugar situation as soon as the measures for the control of wheat are well under way.

The committee came here because Mr. Hoover, believing that the sharp advance in prices was unjustified, had asked the Exchanges to stop dealing in futures. Those on the committee were Henry Schaefer, William Bayne, Jr., L. S. Bache, E. L. Luder, and Manuel E. Rionda.

While this conference was going on the members of the commission, headed by President H. A. Garfield of Williams College, who were selected to determine a fair basic price to be paid in the Government purchases of wheat under the system of control inaugurated, held a preliminary meeting at the Food Administration building. The committee had been informed that the price must be fixed not later than Sept. 1, when the Government plan of taking over the wheat supply of the country became effective. A scale of prices from producer to consumer will ultimately have to be fixed, and Hoover is getting his organization into shape rapidly, realizing that the task set for this department alone after Sept. 1 is a huge one.

The problem of supplying the Allies with meat has devolved mainly on the United States and daily the burden is growing more onerous, according to a statement issued by the Food Administration today. War time demands have been so great that Europe has been making alarming inroads on its herds with a consequent reduction in its domestic supply.

Since the war started there has been a total decrease of 115,005,000 in the world's supply of meat producing animals. Cattle increased 7,090,000 in the United States, while the total world decrease was 28,080,000. Sheep decreased 3,000,000 in this country, while the world supply was diminished by 54,500,000. Hogs increased 6,275,000 in America, but the general supply decreased 32,425,000.

During the year ending June 30, 1916, America exported 1,339,193,000 pounds of meat as compared with a three-year ante-bellum average of 493,848,300 pounds. These exports went chiefly to the Allies, whose capital stock of animals decreased 33,000,000 head.

"The problem facing America is not only one of supplying the immediate demand of the Allies, but one which is more far-reaching in its significance. As the war goes on, there will be a constant lessening of the capital stock of the world's food animals. Among our western allies the demand outruns further every day the decreasing production, and as shipping becomes further shortened by submarine destruction, further destruction of the herds must ensue."

The Food Administration points out that the only immediate solution of the problem lies in reduction of consumption and elimination of waste.

A telegram received by the Coffee and Sugar Exchange yesterday from the committee appointed last week to confer with Food Administrator Hoover regarding the country's sugar supply announced that the committee had pledged the sugar industry to supply the requirements of the army and navy for the years 1917 and 1918, an estimated amount of 100,000 tons of sugar per annum, at a price to be fixed by the Food Administrator.

ROBERT S. LOVETT.

Just what took place at the President's conference with the Federal Trade Commission could not be learned, but it is understood that there were several questions in connection with the commission's report on production cost and other phases of the situation about which the President wanted to ask questions.

President Sends for Records.

The commission was moving to a new building today, and when the President got to the old offices he found things in disorder and not enough chairs to go around. He smiled and began to ask questions, while boys were scurrying about to put in place the few pieces of furniture left in the board room.

Some of the records which the President wanted also had been taken to the new offices, and a messenger was sent for them, causing a slight delay. The conference lasted about fifty minutes.

There were present at the meeting Commissioners Colver and Davies, who have been handling the coal situation, and David Wing, the coal expert.

The Commissioners refused to discuss the conference, and, as the President was silent, the method to be adopted in price fixing was left open to speculation. It was said that the President had his plan pretty well completed and obtained the information he required to put on the finishing touches.

SPURIOUS WARNING ON COAL.

Federal Official Repudiates Message Opposing State Action.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—A scandal impended in the coal hearing as Justice Orrin M. Carter resumed his public sessions on price fixing for Illinois this afternoon. Members of the State Council of Defense are investigating to determine who signed a telegram sent to Dr. F. C. Honnold of the Franklin County Operators' Association, asking Illinois to keep hands off the coal question and signing the name of L. L. Bracken, Secretary of the Federal Trade Commission.

Preliminary investigations by members of the State Council lead them to believe that some one committed a forgery. A copy of the telegram in question was sent to Samuel Insull, Chairman of the State Council, by Dr. Honnold last Monday, and Mr. Insull made it public.

One explanation of the telegram is that it was an excerpt from a message sent to Dr. Honnold by Francis S. Peabody, the Illinois coal operator who is Chairman of the Coal Production Committee of the National Council of Defense. The telegram reads:

"In the judgment of the Federal Trade Commission, local and State complications will make the solution, viewed nationally, more difficult unless whatever may be done by local and State authorities is projected with a view of being coordinated with the Federal plan, as may be determined by the President under the Lever law."

Chief Justice Carter, on resuming the hearing on coal prices, said the State desired to co-operate with the Federal Government in the coal crisis and that he made this statement as reflecting the views of Governor Lowden.

DEFENDS HIGH COAL PRICES.

Illinois Operator Testifies Coal Men Want All They Can Get.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—William S. Scott, President of the Missouri and Illinois Company, which leases coal mines near Belleville, Ill., today testified at a hearing of the Missouri inquiry into the high prices of fuel that it was the policy of the coal men to make all they can, both in war and in peace. Asked as to his idea of a fair profit during war, he said:

"There is no limit. We get what we can. Everybody is doing that, including the farmer."

"Do you think that is right?" asked Assistant Attorney General Gose.

"I am not qualified to say," was the reply. "I am doing all I can to get what I can."

He said the highest price he had obtained recently for coal was $6 a ton for six-inch Carterville lump.

"How do you justify charging $6 for something that cost less than $2 to produce?"

"Because you can get it. You are a lawyer and you wouldn't do a piece of work for $5 if you could get $10 for it," was the reply to Mr. Gose's question.

REBUKES KANSAS COAL MEN.

Gov. Capper Says They Are Squeezing Public to Recoup Railroad Loss.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 20.—Kansas coal operators are selling to the railroads coal at $2 a ton which costs them $2.43 a ton to mine, and are selling the same coal to jobbers and retailers so that the public pays $6 a ton for it. This information was brought out at a conference of coal operators here today with Governor Capper and Attorney General S. M. Brewster. The spokesman for the operators, John Mayer, said the operators were obliged to fill contracts made with the railroads some time ago at too low a price.

"All of which means," Governor Capper answered, "that you are compelling the public to pay exorbitant prices for coal so that you can make good your losses on the coal you are selling to the railroads."

WOULD INCREASE TAX ON WEALTH FOR WAR

RADICALS BACK PROPOSAL

La Follette Introduces Alternative Amendments for a Graduated Tax Drafting Additional Millions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The fight on the war income and excess war profits taxes in the $2,006,970,000 War Revenue bill opened in the Senate today, when Senator Johnson of California denounced the Finance Committee's scheme as falling far short of the levy that ought to be fixed.

In a speech of an hour the California Senator insisted that individuals enjoying large incomes and corporations making huge profits from the war should bear the brunt of the war tax. He spoke of Congress dealing "gently and generously" with the corporations, and urged that a tax be imposed upon them that would force them to pay over a large proportion of their war profits.

Senator Johnson pointed to the 80 per cent. tax on excess war profits exacted by Great Britain, and compared it with the graduated tax contemplated under the War Revenue bill.

"On the minimum of $3,000,000,000 of war profits made last year by our own corporations," said Senator Johnson, "the tax put in this bill is only 20 per cent. Does the Senate think the people will tolerate such easy yielding to the corporations of this country?"

Senator Johnson alluded to the manner in which information about the war "is being handed to the American people," contending that news to which they are entitled is being withheld, or else is being parceled out in a way that is an "affront." He spoke of the landing of the Japanese Mission in San Francisco a month ago, and criticised the Administration for "vague reports that have been given the public about this mission being at a Pacific port," while, Senator Johnson said, San Francisco papers have been printing explicit articles telling of their doings in that city.

"The American people want the truth about this war," said Senator Johnson. "They do not want to be trifled with in this fashion."

Mr. Johnson's attack on the excess war profits and income taxes in the War Revenue bill was the start of a drive against those features that will go on until the measure is taken up for final vote next Saturday. The California Senator is backed by a number of radical Senators on the Republican side, while Democratic radical support is equally marked. Mr. Johnson intends supporting an amendment to appreciably increase the tax on these two items in the measure.

Alternative Amendments.

Senator La Follette, who late in the day introduced two alternative amendments to increase income taxes, feels confident that the Finance Committee's levy will be struck from the bill. Although no poll of the Senate had been made, the Wisconsin Senator said there was sufficient opposition to the committee's tax to defeat it.

From comment heard in the Senate lobby, it appears likely that the vote to strike out the Finance Committee levy and substitute a higher one, as affecting the war profits and incomes, will be close. Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee, expressed the belief tonight that the committee's adjustment of taxes would be adopted on the final vote.

Senator La Follette's two amendments offered today provide:

1. For a graduated tax, running from 1 per cent. on net incomes of $5,000 and not exceeding $6,000, up to 35 per cent. on incomes from $45,000 upward; or,

2. For a tax of 2 per cent. on incomes above $5,000, up to 35 per cent. on all others.

The Senator put in the two amendments, he explained later, so that if one is defeated the other may be adopted. Under the amendment starting on 1 per cent. the yield, he said, would be $648,787,434, as against the yield contemplated under the Finance Committee's scheme of $417,763,083. Under the other amendment, starting with a 2 per cent. tax, the yield would be $505,828,241. Senator La Follette submitted figures to show that Great Britain's income tax yield for this year was $1,162,577,817.

The Wisconsin Senator intends to put in several amendments to increase the excess war profits tax. He will offer, first, an amendment to levy a tax approximating that of Great Britain, 80 per cent., and, if this is voted down, put in others, gradually reducing the tax, in the hope that one of them will be accepted. Senator La Follette will talk nearly all of tomorrow on his tax proposals.

Support of the higher war profits and income tax plan came today from Senator Hollis, Democrat, of New Hampshire, who, in a long speech, urged that the corporations making profit out of the war and individuals with large incomes be obliged to pay a larger share of the burden of the war.

Senator Jones of New Mexico also opposed the tax contemplated under the War Revenue bill as "letting the corporations and men of independent means off too easily."

In his speech, Senator Johnson said:

Two Kinds of Conscription.

"With an unbounding enthusiasm we conscripted the youth of this land to fight for this nation and to die, if necessary, upon a foreign soil. Have you the same enthusiasm for conscripting the wealth of the nation today to stand behind the lads that have gone forth to fight our battles over the seas?

"We are staggered when we think of the amount of money thus far required this year in this war undertaking. Twenty billion dollars! The entire cost of our civil war was $2,500,000,000. The sum today for which we are liable and the sums for which we may become liable a year hence are so enormous that the imagination halts.

"I doubt not, if we proceed in the fashion in which we are proceeding today, that a year hence the liability of the United States will exceed the liability possibly incurred in this war by any contending nation. All this our people are willing to do. But in doing it they ask that a proper share of the burden, a burden greater than was ever placed upon any other people, be placed upon those who make profit out of this war.

"We give the Steel Corporation a dividend upon, first, its preferred stock; then—I use the language of the Chairman of the Finance Committee—we permit it to pay all its expenses and all of its taxes; and then we give this Steel Corporation, in our time of stress and in our time of dire need, when every man's heart is bleeding for his loved ones that go beyond the sea—we give it a dividend equal to more than has been paid in upon its capital stock.

"How the people must scorn a Congress that deals thus tenderly with war profits, while dealing with such severity with the common human clay to put up against the guns. To the Steel Corporation is returned under the bill nearly $300,000,000 profit for this year, because, forsooth, it has coined the blood, and the bone, and the sinew of the land into the dollars it has made. Never can you justify any man who will be willing to give approximately $300,000,000 of war profits back at a time such as this, when money is so badly needed to carry on this great strife.

Criticises Publicity Methods.

"Today I think that I echo what is in every Senator's heart when I say there has not been put forth to the American people that which should be put forth in clarion tones. The mode in which they are handed their publicity now is demonstrated concretely and in a very simple illustration. Recently a Japanese mission came to San Francisco. They arrived there on a certain day last week. For three weeks all the San Francisco newspapers have been exploiting that particular entertainment and that mission's views, and here in Washington and in the East, although all California has published every detail, we read each day: 'At a Pacific port.'

"If you can tell me why that sort of bosh should be indulged in with a people intelligent and critical, a people patriotic and self-sacrificing, I would be delighted to be enlightened. 'At a Pacific port!' And then follows, with the names carefully omitted, the various functions that have been had in behalf of this mission. In my office are the San Francisco papers describing in detail all the dignitaries who were present, all the individuals who participated, and everything in respect to it.

"It may be that in the peculiar and singular sort of mentality we now and then observe, some gentlemen in Washington have thought that, by saying 'At a Pacific port' in Washington, or in Brooklyn, or in New York, or in Boston, we prevented our enemies, the Germans, from knowing whence this particular delegation came and what was done in its behalf, and when it reached this nation.

"I mention this very slight example because it is typical, and I can say for those who, I know, are striving with all their might, who are going forward with all the force of which they are capable, who are, indeed, overflowing with patriotism and desire to serve their land—I ask for them publicity and truth in this war."

Senator Johnson spoke of the Finance Committee's tax on incomes as imposing a levy of 33 per cent. upon the man whose income runs anywhere from $500,000 up.

"The individual with an income of $10,000,000 in this time of stress will have to pay, with this 33 per cent. tax and the tax already existing, 50 per cent. of his income," said Senator Johnson. "That means that he would be handed back $5,000,000 of his income to struggle along on it.

"What a freak generosity that is! Let the Senate impose a tax upon the wealthy that will make them pay their part of this war. The Senate owes this to those who are making the sacrifice of blood in winning this conflict."

The Birth of American Thrift

John Muir

Mr. Muir has written an interesting story of the public's participation in the Liberty Loan.

It shows how extensively the loan was taken by those who subscribed "a dollar down, a dollar a week"; how widespread was the desire to buy on the partial payment plan; how the plan adapts itself to future war financing and to individual investment; and, above all, how it unconsciously inculcates an American habit of thrift vastly superior to the European hoarding idea of thrift.

An appendix containing full details of the methods adopted by industrial corporations, other employers, banks and investment houses will prove valuable reading to all who are interested in forthcoming Government bond issues, either as distributors or as subscribers.

Because "The Birth of American Thrift" should be in the hands of every small investor in the country, single copies can be obtained at a nominal cost of 10 cents.

BOARD EXEMPTS 21 OF 165 WHO APPEAL

NO ESCAPE IN HAY FEVER

Hueller, "Support of Aged Parent," Who Pays Him $5,000 a Year, Must Go to Army.

The District Exemption Board of this city, of which Charles E. Hughes is Chairman, denied exemption claims at the rate of one a minute yesterday. Now and then a claim, generally because the drafted man was engaged in some essential industry, was allowed. It was the district board's busiest day, and when it ended 165 cases had been disposed of. Of these 150 were appeals from decisions of local boards, while 15 were direct appeals. Of the 150 appeals from local boards the appeal was denied in 133 instances, while only 4 of the direct appeals were allowed.

To date the district board has decided 251 cases, denying 222 claims.

Irving Levy appealed from the decision of Local Board 164 because he was a sufferer from hay fever and at times from stomach trouble. His appeal was denied.

Alfred Hueller, an appellant from Board 148, submitted an affidavit that he was the support of aged and infirm parents. He also asked to be exempted because he is engaged in the manufacture of "special high-grade furniture." The report showed that the furniture factory is owned by his father, who pays him $5,000 a year. The appeal was denied.

J. Harry Gerken, who lives in Brooklyn, said he is employed as a gardener at Irvington-on-the-Hudson. The board refused to exempt him as an agriculturist, who would be more useful in the garden than in the army. Robert G. Keesbey asked to be exempted because he works for an insurance company which insures submarine chasers and other war craft. The appeal was denied. Harry Brettholtz said that Local Board 113 had refused to recognize his claim that he has a "mental rupture," in addition to defective vision. The local board doctors reported him physically normal and fit for service, and his appeal was denied.

William E. Payne, Jr., was granted an exemption for six months because he was employed in an important position by a concern which is filling ordnance contracts for the army. Angelo Giglione was also granted a six months' exemption. He is an expert on tractors and is at present inspecting tractor machines being made for the Ordnance Department. Frank A. Starr asked for exemption as Vice President of a company which makes tents for the Government. The appeal was denied.

The first appeal on behalf of the Government was made in the case of Edward A. Cordes of local board 153, who had been granted exemption by the local board on the ground that he was the sole support of his widowed mother. Affidavits presented by him showed that he had contributed $312 to her support in the last year. In the Government's behalf it was set forth that inasmuch as his pay in the army will enable him to contribute $300 a year to his mother's support, there is no good reason for exempting him. In this case the decision of the local board was reversed.

Benjamin Brecher, an appellant from Board 53, in Brooklyn, wanted to be exempted as a "conscientious objector." His appeal was denied and he will be certified for service. Hyman Hartman, Local Board 131, claimed he was disqualified by having broken his foot three years ago, besides being the sole support of his parents. It was found, however, that they had an independent income, and his claim was disallowed.

Pasquale Lupo was certified for service by Board 65, in Brooklyn. He appealed as the sole support of a wife and baby. The affidavits proved his case, and he was ordered exempted. Joseph Mendolia, Board 69, also in Brooklyn, proved that he is the sole support of aged parents, and was ordered exempted. James C. Alexander, Board 19, the Bronx, was also exempted when he produced evidence that he is the sole support of an infirm mother and two young sisters. Ira G. Katz, Board 19, another Bronx board, satisfied the board that he supports aged parents and a sister, and was granted an exemption. In each of these cases the decision of the local boards was reversed.

Mr. Hughes announced that the Committee of Fourteen appointed at the recent meeting of the nine district boards of the State had decided upon a special appeal to the President, through the Governor, urging the exemption of policemen and firemen. The committee also decided upon a special appeal on behalf of medical and dental students, whose services were deemed to be indispensable in this great emergency. In order to bring about uniformity of action on industrial exemption claims a special committee of the Committee of Fourteen, consisting of W. D. Guthrie and Louis Marshall, had drawn up special notices bearing upon these claims, which are to be forwarded to all local boards for their information and guidance. The next public session of the board will be held in the Federal Building at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

ARREST PARENTS WITH SON.

All Charged with Conspiracy to Evade the Draft Law.

Jacob Judelowitz, proprietor of a shoe store in Sag Harbor, L. I.; his wife, Mollie, and their son, Julius, 22 years of age, were arraigned before United States Commissioner McGoldrick in the Federal Building in Brooklyn yesterday, charged with conspiracy in making false statements so that the son might evade the Conscription act. All three pleaded not guilty. The son was held in $2,000 bail and the parents in $500 bail each for an examination on Sept. 12.

Two weeks ago Julius was accepted for the army. He filed a claim for exemption on the ground that he was the "sole support of his mother, father, and sister," and his parents made affidavits supporting his claim. The local board rejected the claim, and an appeal was taken to the Exemption Board of Appeals at Riverhead, the county seat. Meanwhile United States Marshal James M. Power found that the father owned the building where he has conducted his business for the last fifteen years as well as a home in Ross Street, and in addition has accounts in two banks. On Saturday the Marshal found the store in charge of Ethel Judelowitz, a 17-year-old daughter, who declared she did not know where her brother and parents were. The Marshal finally located them at the home of a relative in Brooklyn. If convicted the accused persons may get two years in prison, a fine of $10,000, or both.

BOARDS HOLD DRAFT FIGURES.

Ordered to Turn In Total of Men for Army at Once.

Several local exemption boards are holding back figures which show the men actually enrolled for the national army, according to a statement made at the headquarters of Deputy Attorney General Roscoe S. Conkling. These boards have been instructed to send in their lists at once.

Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling, who on Friday summoned the members of Board 156 to the Criminal Courts Building, refused to talk to newspaper men yesterday. Mr. Conkling exonerated District Attorney Swann from any blame in the case of Board 156. Mr. Swann, it appears, did not know about the affair until he read about it in the papers yesterday morning.

Owing to a shortage of doctors the work of reorganized Board 99 is being held back. Because of the failure of several of the examining physicians to appear only seven men were examined by the board yesterday morning. In the afternoon Dr. Victor C. Pedersen of St. Mark's Hospital and several other medical volunteers went to the rescue of the board, and ninety-two men were examined, of whom forty-eight were passed. The board was still examining men last night. One of the men examined yesterday and who was passed was found by the oculist, Dr. R. L. Reudel, to be suffering from a mild form of trachoma. Dr. Reudel said he could be cured in a month, but Dr. Pedersen, who is a member of the Central Medical Board for the entire city, ordered the man rejected, and ruled trachoma an absolute disqualification, as the disease is both contagious and infectious.

The Mayor's Committee on National Defense issued a statement last night in which it took issue with Provost Marshal General Crowder, who said that only about one-fourteenth of medical students and hospital internes of the country can be taken by the draft. Reports received from the country at large by the committee show that about 8,900 of the 10,385 medical students are subject to the draft and that about 35 per cent. of them are included in the first call. These figures represent about two-thirds of the medical students of the country.

PETROGRAD HOSPITAL A GERMAN SPY CENTRE

Staff and Some of the "Patients" Are Arrested as a Result of a Raid.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 20.—A private hospital in the centre of the city, which was raided today by order of the military authorities, proved to be the headquarters of a German espionage organization.

A patient entered on the records as being a peasant from Novgorod admitted that he was a German Lieutenant. The Director of the hospital, who was supposed to be a Russian woman, was found to be a German subject. Her assistant also gave a false name.

A considerable number of the staff of the institution and several of the patients were arrested.

RUMANIANS DRIVEN BACK.

Berlin Claims Capture of 3,700 Prisoners in Two Battles.

BERLIN, Aug. 20, (via London.)—Forces of the Central Powers on the Rumanian front have driven back the Rumanians on both sides of the Oituz Valley and in the direction of the Trotus Valley, it was officially announced today by the German War Office. In the fighting in the Oituz Valley region the Austro-Germans took 1,500 prisoners and captured 30 machine guns. Stubborn battles developed at the Marasechti Station, on the Sereth River, the Teutons capturing more than 2,200 prisoners.

Eastern Theatre.—Army group of Prince Leopold of Bavaria: There was nothing new.

Army group of Archduke Joseph: German and Austro-Hungarian troops made a vigorous assault on both sides of the Oituz Valley and drove the stubbornly resisting Rumanians back in the direction of the Trotus Valley. A Württembergian Mountain battalion especially distinguished itself. More than 1,500 prisoners and thirty machinge guns have been brought in.

Army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen: On the western bank of the Sereth stubborn struggles developed at the Marasechti railway station, in the course of which more than 2,200 prisoners remained in our hands. South of the confluence of the Ritnic strong Russian attacks failed before our positions.

DELEGATES TO MOSCOW.

Composition of National Congress to be Held There Saturday.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The composition of the conference to be held at Moscow, Aug. 25-27, to consider the political situation and plans for the new National Government, is given in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Petrograd as follows:

Petrograd and Moscow Town Councils, 15 delegates each; other large towns, 7 each; Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates, 100; peasants, 100; town zemstvos, 400; co-operative societies, 300; industry, 120; agricultural societies, 100; representatives of science, 100; Duma, 400.

IS CONFIDENT OF RUSSIA.

Dr. Billings, Red Cross Leader, Applauds the Spirit Found in Petrograd

PETROGRAD, Aug. 20.—"The new Government is facing the present crisis with clearness of vision and sincerity of purpose, which since the formation of the Ministry, less than two weeks ago, has not failed of confidence," said Dr. Frank Billings of Chicago today. "While the seriousness of the situation is manifest, there is every reason to hope that the present Government will be strengthened by the full confidence of the Russian people for the great task before it."

Dr. Billings is one of the leaders of the American Red Cross experts who have been here two weeks, organizing the work for which they were sent to Russia.

They have established a big working headquarters in the Hotel d'Europe and a supply house in Moscow. They have also conferred with heads of the Government from whom they report hearty co-operation. For the technical skill and proficiency of Russian physicians and surgeons Dr. Billings expressed great admiration, while the hospitals, he said, were "run as well as any in the world." He added:

"Waere now in active co-operation with the sanitary department of the army and with the Russian Red Cross and are about to get into touch with the Zemstvos and Unions, the organizations comprising the three great relief organizations of the Russian people.

"While these organizations have exhausted every effort in the manufacture of supplies and are doing excellent work otherwise, we found the armies in great need of medical and surgical supplies, which are vitally necessary for the care of the wounded. Tetanus antitoxin, powdered opium, and many other things are not to be had in adequate quantities in Russia. We are studying these requirements, and, with the co-operation of the War Council and the Red Cross at Washington, the most vital of these needs will be met at once."

Says Russia Needs Railway Dictator

LONDON, Tuesday, Aug. 21.—The Petrograd correspondent of The Times, referring to the railway disorganization of Russia, quotes John F. Stevens of the American Railway Commission as saying that the establishment of a special railway dictatorship during the war is necessary.

COMMENDS BERNSTORFF.

Berlin Paper Says Foreign Office, Not He, Made Policy to America.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 20.—Commenting on Count von Bernstorff's appointment as German Ambassador to Constantinople, the Vossische Zeitung says that Bernstorff is one of Germany's ablest diplomats. His attitude toward great international problems was much discussed during the recent Chancellorship crisis because he was a candidate for the Foreign Secretaryship and the people's judgment of his attitude was mainly influenced by events in America. The paper continues:

"While Bernstorff was in Washington, hints dropped in Berlin necessarily gave the impression that owing to difficultes of communication with Germany he acted on his own initiative and responsibility. We believe this impression was false. Our American policy was conducted by the Berlin Foreign Office at every important period, but details cannot be given during the war."

It is learned on good authority that Bernstorff was at one period of the crisis a serious candidate for the Chancellorship. It appears that he lacked the disposition to come out in the open as holding liberal views, and his new appointment seems to show he deserted the Delbrück party.

WHOLE CITY TO JOIN IN TROOPS' SEND-OFF

CONKLING ASKS SUPPORT

Deputy Attorney General Says Nothing Is Too Good for Men Selected to Serve Nation.

Plans for a "National Army Day," which is to be New York City's farewell to its 39,000 men of the great selective draft army, were discussed at a largely attended meeting held under the auspices of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense in the City Hall yesterday afternoon. The tentative plans approved yesterday call for the setting apart of a day subsequent to the mobilization of the city's quota for service and previous to the departure of the first of the district quotas for Yaphank, when all the people of the city are expected to forget business and everything else to join in a great send-off to the men of the new armies.

The meeting yesterday was called at the suggestion of Mayor Mitchel, who in a letter to George T. Wilson of the committee said:

> In a little while thousands of the young men of New York, chosen through the selective draft, will be called for service in the National Army.
>
> It is the Government's desire that these men receive a farewell befitting the sacrifices which they are about to make in fighting for their country, and in this desire I am sure all citizens will heartily concur. Every American community is preparing, and New York will wish an opportunity to give her sons such a send-off as they deserve.
> I ask you to call upon the organizations affiliated with your committee to arrange an appropriate gala day for these National Army recruits. Let us cause these men to feel that our hearts are with them.

Prior to the announcement of the tentative program for National Army Day Deputy Attorney General Roscoe S. Conkling, the representative of the Federal and State Governments in New York City, made a short speech in which he emphasized the fact that it was the duty of all good citizens to honor the men of the national army. Nothing, he said, was too good for these half million young men.

"The thing we must do," said Mr. Conkling, "is to dissipate and kill forever the idea, prevalent in some sections of the country, that the men of the national army are drafted men, men who have been forced into the army and who will be forced to fight. I have talked at length with Lieut. Col. Johnson, executive officer of the Provost Marshal General; General Crowder himself, and the Adjutant General of the State, and I have yet to hear or remember the time that any man in high official circles thought or talked in terms of conscript or draft. They spoke of nothing other than the selected service men.

"The whole thing is, there has been no call for volunteers. There was no one who did not expect a call for volunteers. It did not come because, in the wisdom of the men responsible, the guiding hands, the brains of the nation in 1917, in the midst of this world conflict, it was not the time to call for volunteers. They said: 'We will do it in another way.'"

> Provide an arm band or other distinctive device for the men called under the national army to mark each wearer as an object for special attentions.
>
> Decorations throughout the city.
>
> Religious services for the members of the national army on the Saturday and Sunday preceding the day set for the celebration.
>
> Parade of the quotas as a whole or by units.
> Entertainments, city or local, with music and speaking, parties in churches, neighborhood clubs, societies, homes, &c.; free admission for selected men to moving-picture theatres and other places of amusement.

Among those at the meeting yesterday were Philip D. McCook, Director of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense; Franklin A. Plummer, representing the Bankers' Club; Max Morgenthau, Jr., George F. Kunz, William G. Willcox, William M. K. Olcott, John A. Dutton, William H. Brady of the Rotary Club, Dr. Walter L. Laidlaw, E. W. Estes of the Broadway Association, President Thomas D. Green of the Hotel Association, De Forest Hicks, Theodore B. Rechter, representing the Young Men's Hebrew Association; Edward J. McCue, George C. Fraser, H. Ward Smith, and representatives of various patriotic and business organizations.

Committees are to be immediately appointed to complete the arrangements for the National Army Day. The day on which the tribute will be paid to the new army, which will probably be in the latter part of next week or early in the week following, will be announced in a few days.

NEW HEAD OF CITY RECORD.

Mayor Appoints Joseph N. Quail, Well Known as a News Executive.

Mayor Mitchel announced yesterday the appointment of Joseph N. Quail as supervisor of the City Record to succeed David Ferguson, who resigned recently on account of ill health. Mr. Quail has been a member of the Typographical Union No. 6 since 1883. He has been city editor of The New York World, The Evening World, The Evening Journal, and The New York American, and night city editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES. At present he is associate editor of The New York Times Annalist. He is a member of the executive committee of the City Democracy, the organization recently established to fight the leadership of Charles F. Murphy in Tammany Hall.

The Mayor sent a letter yesterday to former Supervisor Ferguson expressing regret at his resignation and adding:

"I was familiar with conditions that you found existing in that department when you were appointed, now nearly eight years ago. You took hold of the situation, which demanded not only great energy but a vast amount of tact and judgment, in a most successful way. The result of your efforts has been a great financial saving to the city, as well as the establishment of a good system.

"I wish to say that New York City, by your resignation, loses a faithful and able department head and that personally I regret that ill health has compelled you to sever our relations, which have always been of the most pleasant character."

Home Defenders Become Guardsmen

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—The State Guard of 8,000 men, organized as a force for home defense, succeeded today to the status of a National Guard body by proclamation of Governor McCall. The change makes it possible for the authorities to call out the organizations for duty in connection with strike riots or other disturbances.

6,637 British Mercantile Sailors Lost

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Since the outbreak of the war 6,627 officers and men of the British mercantile marine, exclusive of those in the pay of the Admiralty, have lost their lives, according to a statement made in the House of Commons this afternoon by Sir Albert Stanley, President of the Board of Trade.

OVER 2,000,000 AT WORK ON BRITISH MUNITIONS

Churchill Says Army Is No Longer Tapping Stored-Up Resources of the National Energy.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Colonel Winston Churchill, Minister of Munitions, has begun the reorganization of the British Munitions Department. In a statement tonight he says the department is now employing 2,000,000 persons and the Headquarters Staff 13,500, and that it is controlling an expenditure of between £600,000,000 and £700,000,000 a year. Colonel Churchill says the work the department has done has done has made the British armies "the best equipped and most formidably armed in Europe."

"But," the Minister adds, "after these great efforts, and in the fourth year of the war, we no longer are tapping stored-up resources of the national energy or mobilizing. We are applying them for the first time to the war. The magnitude of the effort and achievement approximates continually the limits of possibility. Already, in many directions, the frontiers are in sight, and it is necessary therefore not simply to expand but to go back over the ground already covered and by thrifty and harmonious methods glean a further reinforcement of war power."

For this purpose, Colonel Churchill says, it has been decided to form the fifty departments of the Ministry into ten groups, each to be presided over by an experienced officer of the Ministry, who will constitute a council, the functions of which will be similar to those of the Army Council.

BRITISH MINERS TURN AGAINST STOCKHOLM

Seamen Thank Government for Refusal to Issue Passports to Delegates.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The national conference of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain decided today at Exmouth by a vote of 376 to 354 that the British Labor Party should not be represented at the International Socialist Conference at Stockholm. This is a reversal of a previous decision of the federation.

The decision of the conference at Exmouth probably will have some influence on the meeting of the Labor Party tomorrow, when the whole question will be reviewed. At the meeting of the Labor Party on Aug. 10, when a decision was reached in favor of attending a consultative conference at the Swedish capital, the miners practically held the deciding vote, which they cast in favor of sending delegates to the conference after hearing the statement of Arthur Henderson, Labor member of the British War Council, who, the following day, resigned.

The conference of representatives of seamen's organizations of several allied and neutral countries, which has been in session here, passed today a resolution of approval of and thanks to the British Government for its decision not to issue passports to delegates to the Stockholm congress. The resolution expresses the opinion that the vote of the British labor conference in favor of sending delegates to Stockholm "was not a true and representative vote of the opinion of organized labor, and that a true vote can only be taken by a referendum of the trades unionists."

A ferendum is asked by the resolution, the request being made that it be taken by the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress.

HUNTINGTON NIECE IN SUIT.

Mrs. Perkins Seeks Accounting from Husband Now Parted from Her.

Letters bearing on the domestic affairs of Mrs. Clara Lenora Huntington Perkins and her husband, Gilbert B. Perkins, a Brooklyn automobile dealer, were found in a safe deposit box held jointly by husband and wife. They form a chapter in the report of Referee Charles L. Hoffman, who was appointed to make a list of the box contents in connection with Mrs. Perkins's suit against her husband for an accounting. The order permitting the opening of two safe deposit boxes was obtained by Mrs. Perkins in July. The safe deposit box in a Brooklyn institution yielded $60,000 worth of bonds, and one in Manhattan was found to contain the letters. In one of them Mrs. Perkins, who is a daughter of Henry E. Huntington and a niece of Collis P. Huntington, writes to her father-in-law concerning the family troubles.

In an affidavit Mrs. Perkins says that domestic differences arose two years ago, and that she and her husband parted last January. She went to California with the three children, Tod, aged 6½ years, Jane 5 years, and Aline 3¼ years old. In the deposit box were found $20,000 in Central Pacific Railway bonds, $20,000 in Erie Railroad first mortgage gold bonds, and $20,000 Erie general lien gold bonds.

SHOOT GERMAN IN A BOAT.

Wounded by Michigan Soldiers and Is Arrested on Landing in Canada.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Aug. 20.—Alfred Benninghaus, a German merchant, was wounded by machine gun bullets early today, when his launch was fired on by Michigan infantrymen in a patrol boat after a command to stop had not been obeyed. Two other persons in the launch escaped injury. Benninghaus and his companions reached the Canadian side, where they promptly were arrested, and are being held pending investigation.

It is alleged that the trio attempted to evade inspection by American officials on a trip from the American to the Canadian side of the St. Mary's River.

WARNS NEUTRAL SHIPPING.

Cecil for Putting Those Aiding Foes on Enemy-Ship Basis After War.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—In principle the British Government is of the opinion, Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, told the House of Commons today, that neutral shipping which has been persistently and continuously assisting Great Britain's enemies should be treated after the war on the same footing as enemy shipping.

Vessels that lie in port in consequence of the German Government's threats the Minister added, would certainly be considered as assisting the belligerent objects of the enemy.

2,000 SHELLS HIT MONASTIR.

One-Fourth of City Destroyed by Fire Caused by Bombardment.

CORFU, Aug. 20.—One-quarter of the Serbian city of Monastir has been destroyed by fire caused by a Bulgarian bombardment, the Serbian Press Bureau announces. The number of victims has not been ascertained.

The statement says that on Saturday the Bulgarians bombarded the city more violently than ever, firing some 2,000 shells.

There was no reason for the bombardment, as no fighting was in progress. Women and children, who fled in all directions, have been collected and taken to the rear.

It is understood that he will go to France to assist in the construction and operation of railroad lines there for the transportation of troops, munitions, and supplies. Elisha Lee, General Manager, has been appointed Acting Vice President.

BAKER WITHDRAWS HAMILTON'S NAME

Senate Committee Was About to Investigate New Yorker's Fitness for a Generalship.

HE EXPLAINS APPOINTMENT

Says It Is "Reward for Services Not on Record"—Reichmann Appears in His Own Defense.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The War Department sent word to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs today that it would withdraw the appointment of Henry De Witt Hamilton, former Adjutant General of New York, to be a Brigadier General in the national army and to be assigned to the Twenty-seventh (New York) Division. His nomination was sent to the Senate last week by the President, on the advice of the War Department, but was held up by the Military Affairs Committee pending investigation.

The word conveyed by the War Department to the Senate committee was that General Hamilton had been found unequal to the task intended for him, owing to his accident on Aug. 7, in New York, when he was run down by an automobile.

While the War Department acted upon the ground of General Hamilton's physical disability, word had reached the Senate committee in criticism of the appointment because of General Hamilton's lack of experience as a soldier. The committee had before it the record of General Hamilton's National Guard service, which ended with the rank of Captain of the Twenty-third Infantry of Brooklyn in 1895, excepting for his service under Governors Sulzer and Glynn as Adjutant General of the State.

The Military Affairs Committee had begun to discuss the appointment of General Hamilton today, with a view to urging that the Senate refuse confirmation, when word came from the War Department that the nomination would be withdrawn.

Colonel Carl Reichmann, Inspector General of Militia in the Central Department, with headquarters at Chicago, who was recommended by the President for appointment as Brigadier General in the national army, was in Washington today, ready to go before the Senate Military Committee to deny charges of Senator Poindexter of Washington, that he had made pro-German utterances and was opposed to sending American troops to France. The committee will ask Colonel Reichmann to appear before it within a day or so.

"There has been a mistake," said Colonel Reichmann tonight. "I have not given utterance to the statements attributed to me. I do not believe there will be any trouble in convincing the Senate Committee that I have been misrepresented."

The Senate late today confirmed all the 200 appointments of Generals recommended last week by the President excepting those of General Hamilton and Colonel Reichmann.

General Henry De Witt Hamilton said to a TIMES reporter at the New York Hospital yesterday that his appointment by President Wilson to a brigadier generalship was a surprise to him. General Hamilton said that he had asked the War Department only for a Colonelcy in the national army, but that he believed the appointment of Brigadier General had been given to him "as a reward for services not on the record." The General is suffering with a broken leg as the result of being run down by an automobile.

General Hamilton said that he had gone to the meeting of the National Guard Association in San Francisco in November, 1915, as spokesman for Lindley M. Garrison, then Secretary of War, and for the late Brigadier General Albert L. Mills, then Chief of the Division of Militia Affairs. He said he was the only member who voted for his resolution favoring the Continental army plans, although it had been insisted that, in spite of the certainty of defeat, the resolution be presented.

Upon his return to Washington, General Hamilton said, he was congratulated by Secretary Garrison upon his fight against odds. He said that General Mills had also consoled him, and told him to "never mind about that now, for we may send for you some day." General Hamilton said he had also performed other services for the War Department, and he "believed these services were remembered in the War Department."

"I asked only for a Colonelcy in the national army," said General Hamilton, "and I expressed willingness to serve in any rank or commission the department might see fit to give me. I asked Senator Calder to introduce me in the War Department and the General Staff because I wanted to be sure of a hearing, but I found at once that officers and officials remembered my record and they addressed me as General. They said they were entirely familiar with my record, and that it would be unnecessary for me to go into details.

"I came to New York from Illinois about thirty years ago to enter West Point and I was rejected, not because of physical unfitness, but because of ignorance and stupidity," said General Hamilton. "Since then I have been engaged in trying to find out why I cannot wear a uniform."

In speaking of his military record, General Hamilton said he had served six years as Captain of a company in the Twenty-third New York Infantry and that his men had held the State record for marksmanship for two years. Then he was inspector of small arms practice on the staff of Brig. Gen. James McLeer. He left active service in the National Guard about 1895, he said.

At the outbreak of the Spanish War, General Hamilton said, he became Captain in the 201st Volunteer Infantry and spent four months in training at Camps Black and Meade. Before the regiment was mustered out of service at the end of the war without having had a chance for service in the field, General Hamilton said he had been promoted to be Major after the promotion had been offered to George Albert Wingate, then Captain and Adjutant in the 201st Regiment, who, by continuous service in the National Guard, has now risen to the rank of Colonel of the Second Field Artillery.

"As Major in the 201st I had an opportunity to study methods of transportation and communication as well as many other problems of warfare because of my work as corps field officer of the day and as a Major on detached duty," said General Hamilton.

In reply to questions upon the condition of his leg that was broken when he was run down by an automobile in Fifth Avenue early in August, General Hamilton said that he would prefer to leave all reports upon his physical fitness to army surgeons who would examine him. Although the plaster paris cast has not yet been removed from the leg, General Hamilton said he hoped to be able to leave the New York hospital within a few weeks.

DR. WEKERLE BECOMES PREMIER OF HUNGARY

Succeeds Esterhazy, Reported in Clash With Independence Party on Peace.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 20.—The Wolff Bureau, the semi-official German news agency, in a dispatch from Budapest, announces that Dr. Alexander Wekerle has been appointed Premier of Hungary, in succession to Count Moritz Esterhazy.

Dr. Wekerle was Premier and Minister of Finance in Hungary from April, 1906, to January, 1910. The resignation of the Wekerle Cabinet was due to the breaking up of the coalition party that had supported Dr. Wekerle when he tried to establish a Hungarian State bank independent of the existing Austrian banking institution.

A dispatch from Amsterdam Sunday said that there was a likelihood of the resignation of Count Esterhazy owing to friction between the Premier and Count Karolyi, President of the Hungarian Independence Party, particularly on the question of foreign policy and the conclusion of peace.

NAMES CITY CLUB IN BRIBE CONFESSION

EXPECTED SWANN TO BID

Wilson Tells Rabbi That His Statement Ought to be Worth $25,000 for "Political Effect."

A. L. Wilson, the alleged go-between in the bribery charges against Lucian S. Breckinridge, formerly Assistant District Attorney, declared yesterday that he was determined to recant his testimony against Breckinridge in response to a substantial consideration offered to him for so doing by an agent of the City Club. Wilson made this statement to Dr. Samuel Buchler, Jewish Chaplain at Sing Sing, who was asked to take his confession after the man had notified Assistant District Attorney Talley, from the Tombs, that he wanted to talk.

According to Dr. Buchler, Wilson said he was driven to accepting the bribe because his wife and two children were in want. He charged that he had been mistreated by the District Attorney's office, and that he could not be induced to stand by his Breckinridge testimony unless District Attorney Swann would pay him at least $5,000. Dr. Buchler said Wilson estimated the value of the retraction he was about to make, because of its political effect, at $25,000.

Wilson caused a sensation on Saturday by asking that he be sent back to the Tombs after he had been out on $10,000 bail for more than six months as a material witness in the Breckinridge case. He announced that John Kirkland Clark, associate counsel with Chase Mellen for the City Club, would also act as his counsel. Following his surrender, Mr. Clark declared that Wilson had come to him with the declaration that his testimony before the Grand Judy was perjured, and that he was eager to rectify it as soon as possible. For that reason, according to Wilson, he thought he had better go back to the Tombs and demand a "show down."

Wilson Tells His Grievances.

In his testimony, Wilson had said that he was the "go-between" who paid Breckinridge $500 for the extraordinary protection which Breckinridge was alleged to have promised to the Division Street Suit and Cloak Manufacturers Association against strike violence.

Dr. Buchler was closeted with Wilson and his wife for more than an hour. The wife, according to Dr. Buchler, was opposed to the step which her husband said he was taking for the sake of herself and their children.

"I explained to Wilson," said Dr. Buchler in reporting the man's confession to District Attorney Swann, "that I was a disinterested party to the affair, and asked him to tell me confidentially why he gave himself up. He answered: "Because I have been mistreated in the District Attorney's office. In politics, a statement I am going to make now, if Mr. Clark will see me this afternoon, is worth $25,000."

Wilson, according to Dr. Buchler, then recited numerous grievances against the members of the District Attorney's staff, and was interrupted by his wife, who begged him to tell what he intended to accomplish by his actions. Wilson's reply as quoted by the rabbi was as follows:

"Now listen, it will be another chapter in our life from today on. I have been promised immunity. I will be taken care of, and I can get almost anything I want now."

Asked whether Wilson had named the source from which he expected to receive these considerations, Dr. Buchler replied:

"He said from the City Club. He also said: 'Now, Dr. Buchler, what do you think would be a reasonable amount for me to receive for sticking to the District Attorney's office?'. So I said, 'You ought to know, Wilson, that by recanting you will be a self-confessed perjurer.'".

Then, according to the rabbi, Wilson quoted a Jewish proverb, which was to the effect that if a Jew was determined to break the law he might as well break it by eating pork as by eating candy; in other words, he might as well commit a sin worth while.

"This was the foreword," said Dr. Buchler, "of what he considered a reasonable sum for sticking to the District Attorney's office. He said $5,000 would be the sum reasonable to give, and that the District Attorney's office could save $20,000 by it because it would be worth that much."

When asked whether Wilson meant that if the District Attorney paid him $5,000 he would not recant the testimony he had already given, Dr. Buchler replied:

"That was the understanding. He told me he thought Judge Swann was worth $500,000."

Talks of the "Man Higher Up."

Wilson, the rabbi said, discussed the possibility of Swann's being removed from office. According to Dr. Buchler, Wilson said he was assured by a "man higher up" that even if Swann was reelected he need fear no one, as he would be well taken care of, and amply protected. "That man higher up," said Wilson, according to the rabbi, "is in it, and his word ought to be good."

In discussing Wilson's statement, District Attorney Swann said last night that he did not believe that the City Club had any knowledge of any bribe being offered for the retraction of the Breckinridge testimony, but that somebody pretending to represent the City Club had undoubtedly made advances to him.

John Kirkland Clark, speaking on behalf of the City Club, said:

"Any talk of any member of the City Club having made any offer to Wilson is perfectly ridiculous. I am not his counsel, although on two different occasions he did come to me with a statement that he wished to retract his tesmony against Breckinridge because it was perjured and false. He was very much disgruntled because the District Attorney's office was not paying him enough for his services as a material witness in the Breckinridge case."

BURNED TO DEATH IN AIR.

Aviators Were Experimenting with a New Smoke Bomb.

BUFFALO, Aug. 20.—Charles A. Wall, Jr., and Richard H. Mead were burned to death here late this afternoon when an airplane in which they were experimenting with smoke bombs caught fire in the air. Both men were dead when the destroyed airplane fell to the ground.

Wall was a civil engineer in training for aviation service. Mead was an aviation instructor who came to Buffalo recently from the training camp at Mineola, L. I.

Wall and Mead had gone to a height of about 700 feet to make tests of the new bomb. Circling the field, they released one of the bombs, which burst into smoke at a safe distance below the machine. Then watchers on the ground, among them the inventor, saw Wall lean over the side, a second bomb in his hand. He dropped it, and almost immediately there was a flash, and the planes were ablaze.

Mead, who was driving the airplane, pointed the nose downward, apparently in an effort to get to earth while there was yet time to escape the flames. But when the blazing machine dropped the men were found burned beyond recognition.

Wall was 32 years of age, and was the son of a Buffalo physician. Mead was 27 years of age, and his home was in Boston.

POSED AS DANIELS'S SON.

Secretary Warns Against Imposter Who Passed Worthless Checks.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—A mysterious stranger, passing himself off as a son of Secretary Daniels, has obtained numerous sums of money, and to date has eluded capture.

The Navy Department issued a warning today against the imposter. On July 9 the imposter, as Herbert J. Daniels, introduced himself to the officers of the receiving ship at the New York Navy Yard, was invited to luncheon, and succeeded in borrowing $20 from the ship's paymaster.

On July 25 as Frank Daniels, he called on the Principal of the Montclair, N. J., Academy, said he had been commissioned by Rear Admiral Usher to arrange for a naval encampment on the academy campus and expressed a desire to visit Thomas A. Edison at Orange. Dr. M. Reese Hutchison, Mr. Edison's confidential man, took the stranger to his own home for luncheon and then to the inventor's laboratory.

The Navy Department says Dr. Hutchison lost $250 in cash by taking the stranger's check. When Dr. Hutchison came to Washington he handed to Secretary Daniels a letter from his "son" and the fraud was disclosed.

In the meantime the imposter again called at Dr. Hutchison's home in Orange saying he was going to stay there a week. He borrowed a camera from the butler and then proceeded to the Edison storage battery plant, where he got $30 from the superintendent on a bad check.

"On Sunday, July 29," says the Navy Department, "a Secret Service man saw the young man in Orange, but the young man wore a different suit of clothes and had no glasses, and the Secret Service man, not being sure of his ground, did not arrest him."

LIQUOR FIGHT IN ASBURY.

First Move in Effort to Repeal the "Mile Limit" Law.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 20.—Under the initiative section of the commission Government law, Counselor Charles E. Cook presented to the Asbury Park Commissioners today a petition signed by 397 voters, asking that an ordinance be passed to license and regulate the sale of liquor in Asbury Park.

Cook asserts the law makes it mandatory for the Commissioners either to pass an ordinance or call a special election that voters may express their wishes. Such a law would be directly in conflict with the State statute prohibiting the sale of liquor within a mile of a camp meeting ground, and backers do not hope that an ordinance would be enforced, but if adopted, the fact would be made the basis for a fight before the Legisuature next Winter for the repeal of the mile-limit law.

Sustains Decision on Free Tolls.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Judge Evans of the United States Court today sustained the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission declaring invalid the usual provision in the contracts between the railroads and telegraph companies, by which free service is given on both sides. The commission decided that the telegraph company must pay for its railroad service and the railroad company must pay for its telegraph service, nothwithstanding any contracts. Judge Mayer of the United States Court in New York, in a suit brought by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company against the Western Union Telegraph Company some months ago, decided against the latter company, and held that the ruling of the commission was erroneous, and the United States Circuit Court of Appeals sustained that decision.

I. W. W. STRIKE ORDER PROVES A FIASCO

ASCRIBED TO THE ARRESTS

Prompt Action by Military at Spokane Believed to Have Had a Deterrent Influence.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 20.—No evidence of a general strike of construction workers and harvest hands was visible in the Northwest States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana tonight, and so far as could be ascertained, no attempt was made by any I. W. W. leader to carry out the strike order issued recently by James Rowan, District I. W. W. Secretary at Spokane.

The swift and unexpected action last night of military authorities at Spokane in arresting Rowan and twenty-six other alleged Industrial Workers of the World is believed to have had a powerful influence in deterring the radical members of the organization from precipitating a strike which, it is admitted, might have had serious results.

The 27 men who were arrested by Major Clement Wilkins, in charge of the National Guardsmen at Spokane, on instructions from State officials and Colonel Clarence W. Dentler, Commander of the United States Army in the Northwest, are held as military prisoners and will be examined in a few days. Some of them, it is said, will be released after the hearing which will be conducted by Major Wilkins.

Advices today from Wallace, Idaho, stated that troops had been placed in the Coeur d'Alene mining district to preserve order. At Lewiston, Idaho, troops also have arrived to take care of the I. W. W. situation.

From Seattle reports were received that the I. W. W. construction workers in that district would take a strike referendum vote Sept. 10.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 20.—Both sides in the controversy between alleged Industrial Workers of the World members and the Citizens' Loyalty League of Bisbee, which on July 12 deported more than 1,200 strikers and sympathizers, were taken to task today by Governor Campbell in a statement. Methods of deporting men without due process of law were declared to be without justification, while the tactics alleged to have been adopted by members of the Industrial Workers of the World were characterized as a "stench in the nostrils of decent Americans."

The Governor's statement was in the form of a letter to Sheriff Wheeler and County Attorney Ross of Cochise County, and Mayor Ericson of Bisbee. He told the Cochise County authorities that "henceforth I shall look to the officials of Cochise and all Arizona counties for co-operation in enforcement of the laws.

RULES DRAFT ACT IS CONSTITUTIONAL

Judge Speer Denies Habeas Corpus Writs to Georgians Who Did Not Register.

RIDDLES 'SLAVERY' CHARGE

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Aug. 20.—United States Judge Emory Speer of the Southern District of Georgia affirmed the constitutionality of the Draft act today in a decision on the cases of Albert Jones and John Story, who took habeas corpus proceedings in an effort to escape imprisonment for failing to register for military duty.

Jones and Story were guided largely by the advice of Thomas E. Watson, the People's Party candidate for President in 1904, who has been carrying on a furious campaign in his paper, The Jeffersonian, against the draft. Watson appeared in court as one of the attorneys for Story and Jones, who are negroes.

The principal plea made in behalf of Story and Jones was that the Draft act was in conflict with the Constitutional amendment forbidding, slavery or involuntary servitude. Judge Speer held that this argument rested on the assumption that a soldier was a slave, an assumption which he declared to be "abhorrent to the truth." The decision, which was rendered at Mt. Airy, Ga., is as follows:

"Arthur Jones and John Story, imprisoned in the Richmond County Jail under commitment for unlawfully failing to register for military duty as required by the act of Congress of May 18, 1917, known popularly as the selective draft law, have made application for writs of habeas corpus. They allege that their imprisonment is unlawful. They charge that the enactment, made to raise a national army, is violative of the Constitution of the United States. It is insisted that the authority exercised by the United States under this legislation is void because the act contravenes the Thirteenth Amendment. This provides that 'neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crime whereof the parties shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.'

"To agree to this contention, we must conclude that a soldier is a slave. Nothing could be more abhorrent to the truth, nothing more degrading to that indispensable and gallant body of citizens trained in arms, to whose manhood, skill, and courage is and must be committed the task of maintaining the very existence of the nation, and all that its people hold dear. The Grand Army of the Republic, the Confederate Veterans, and the Sons of Veterans are not maintained to preserve the traditions of slavery. Nations do not pension slaves, to commemorate their valor. They do not 'give in charge their names to the sweet lyre,' nor does

To guard and to immortalize the trust.

Can't Escape Service Abroad.

"The sole additional ground of the petition is, that by the common law it was the right of petitioners to 'remain within the realm,' and that this right should now be held to relieve them from military service beyond the borders of the United States. The reply is that the common law, that is, the immemorial English law, cannot prevail as to the United States or its people against the explicit provision of an act of Congress. Nor has a court of the United States power to declare an act of Congress invalid because it is inimical to the common law. The touchstone for such judicial power is the Constitution and nothing else.

"It remains to be determined whether the Constitution has conferred authority on Congress to enact this law. Clause 11 of Article I., Section 8 of the Constitution, empowers Congress 'to raise and support armies.' This power is plenary. It is not restricted in any manner. Congress may summon to its army thus authorized every citizen of the United States. Since it may summon all, it may summon any. Said the Supreme Court in the case of The United States vs. Tarble, 13 Wallace, 408: 'Among the powers assigned to the national Government is the power to raise and support armies. * * * Its control over the subject is plenary and exclusive. It can determine without question from any State authority how the army shall be raised, whether by voluntary enlistment or forced draft, the age at which the soldiers shall be received and the period for which they shall be taken; the compensation he shall be allowed, and the service to which he shall be assigned.'

"It is urged that by this legislation Congress has taken over and in this way conscripted the National Guard. This, it is said, is the State militia. It is contended under Clause 14 of the article and section above quoted that such militia can be used only to execute the laws of the Union, to suppress insurrection, and repel invasion. Since those petitioners are not members of the National Guard, in no event could their rights in this way be affected. But the national army is not the militia. An army is a body of men whose business is war, (Burroughs v. Peyton, 16 Gratt, Virginia, 475. The militia is 'a body of men composed of citizens occupied temporarily in the pursuits of civil life,' but organized by discipline and drill, and called into the field for temporary military service when the exigencies of the country require it.' (Idem.)

"As we have seen, Congress in the exercise of the power to raise armies may summon to the colors every citizen. It follows that the States, even if they so desire, cannot defeat this power by enlisting such citizens in the State troops or National Guard. Were this possible, it would be also possible for the States to prevent altogether the raising of armies by Congress.

Right to Anticipate Invasion.

"There remains to be considered the contention that Congress cannot employ the national army to be created by virtue of this legislation in foreign lands or beyond the seas. If this is true, then indeed is our country impotent. Then must its people indeed suffer in their own homes, in their cities and on their farms, all the horrors of invasive war. Its military leaders must ignore the settled principle of their science, that the best defensive is the most vigorous offensive. The keen swords of its sons, instead of flashing over the guard of the enemy and piercing his vitals, must be held immovable, as if on an anvil, to be shattered by the reiterated blows of his hammer. Deprived of our aid in the field, successive defeats will visit and crush our allies. Their lands conquered, their navies taken, we must then in turn, solitary and alone, meet on our own soil the impact of victorious and barbarous legions whose laws do not forbid their service abroad, but which inspire their fierce and veteran armies to deeds of conquest in every clime.

"Were this contention maintainable, the misguided men who for their personal ease advance it might all too late discover their fatal error. They would discover it in the flaming homesteads, in the devastated fields, in murdered brethren, in outraged wives and daughters; in their lands, their factories, their merchandise, their stock, their all, coolly appropriated by the conqueror as his own; their institutions destroyed, homeless, landless, and beggars to spend whatever interval of degraded life remains to them in abject slavery to the conqueror.

"But our organic law does not so shackle the gigantic energies of the great republic. After the enumeration of the powers of Congress, among them, as we have seen, 'the power to raise and support armies,' in Clause 17 of Article I., Section 8, it provides the power to 'make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof.' Here is the greatest reservoir of power to save the national existence.

"It is said that there is no express power to send armies beyond the sea. True; but there is no express power to enact the criminal laws of the United States; none to convey the public domain, to build a transcontinental railroad, nor to construct the Isthmian Canal, nor to create the Interstate Commerce Commission, nor to declare the Monroe Doctrine, nor to make the Louisiana Purchase, nor to buy Alaska, nor to take over Porto Rico and the Philippines. This has all been done under the great power to promote the general welfare, just as the selective army will be created under the law here assailed, 'to provide for the common defense;' and beyond and above all is the inherent power of every nation, however organized, to utilize its every man and its every energy to defend its liberty and to defeat the migration to its soil of mighty nations of ferocious warriors, whose barbarous inhumanity for three years has surpassed all others since the death of Attila, the scourge of God. The writs are denied."

DRAFT MOBILIZATION CHANGES

Second Increment Will Be Called Sept. 19, and Third on Oct. 3.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Mobilization of the second increment of draft troops was today changed from Sept. 15 to 19, and the third increment from Sept. 30 to Oct. 3. Mobilization of the first increment will be as previously announced, Sept. 5.

The postponements are said to be due to delays in the local boards in getting their quotas ready for service.

A new definite statement of the Administration's interpretations of the exemption of married men and those with dependents is expected within a few days. President Wilson has taken up the question, and probably will settle the problem himself.

ASK ADVICE ON LIQUOR LAW.

Hotel Men Tell of Difficulty in Refusing to Serve Officers.

Proprietors of New York hotels are perplexed over the recent decision banning drinks to uniformed men of the army and navy. A violation of the law puts the hotel men in jeopardy, it is asserted, and might result in the loss of their license.

The West Side Hotel Club, comprising the larger hotels uptown, at their meeting yesterday, took up the question officially. Copeland Townsend, owner of the Hotel Majestic, sent a letter to United States Attorney General Gregory at Washington in which he said:

"The hotel men of New York find great difficulty in complying with the law requiring that they shall not sell alcoholic liquors to officers and men in uniform of the United States Army and Navy.

"Invariably these men are accompanied by others in civilian clothes and frequently women are in the party. The uniformed members of the group order soft drinks and the others call for alcoholic liquors. When these are served there is often an exchange. What I should like to know is, under these conditions, are the hotel men liable?

"The question is going to be one of great importance. If, in order to be on the safe side, we refuse to serve drinks at tables where there are uniformed persons is means loss to us and also disturbs our patrons. Like all such special laws, it is causing much trouble for those who wish to aid the government and at the same time observe the strict letter of the law.

"Men have been known to go into a dressing room, for instance, take off their uniform blouse and put on something else—then come out and get a drink. At the beaches an officer can stay around all day in bathing suit and drink all he desires. The problem is such a knotty one that we believe the hotel men, who are honestly trying to observe the ruling, should be informed just what they should do. As I see it, the only possible ruling is to refuse to serve drinks at any table where there are men in uniform, and this is, and rightly so, offensive to civilians who believe inherently that this is a free country.'

ENROLL JERSEY CITY QUOTA.

But 22,000 Exemption Cases Undecided by First District Board.

It was said last night that the exemption boards in Jersey City had practically enrolled their quotas. The First District Board, of which General William C. Heppenheimer is the Chairman, and which has jurisdiction in Passaic, Hudson, and Bergen Counties, now has before it for action 22,000 exemption claims. It was expected that by yesterday 30 per cent. of the quotas would have been certified to by the section boards, but this has not been done and the delay is mainly due to confusion as to the procedure to be followed.

Out of twelve cases of occupational exemption only two claims were allowed and these were for a period of six months.

DRAFT OFFICERS GET TWO YEARS IN PRISON

ernment was Abraham Leicher of 71 Cannon Street, who is credited by the United States District Attorney's office with the exposure of the bribery plot and with the conviction of Cherey and Bernfeld. Leicher testified that Gruher had approached him on Aug. 6 with the proposal that he might obtain exemption if he would pay $300 to Dr. Bernfeld. Leicher said that he refused the offer, was examined, and passed by the board. He said, however, that Dr. Bernfeld told him that he might be exempted for weak eyes if he would pay $300, $150 to go to an eye specialist for his opinion that Leicher's eyes were bad and $150 to Dr. Bernfeld. Leicher said that he declined the offer, but later, after hearing rumors that there was a great deal of grafting in the district, he telephoned to the United States District Attorney's office and told his story.

Accuser Set a Trap.

After this, intending to trap Gruher, Leicher said that he telephoned to Gruher and said he was now willing to pay the money and that he wanted his brother Jacob exempted, too, on similar terms. He said that Gruher declined to discuss the matter over the telephone and asked Leicher to call.

Leicher said that he and his brother met Gruher the following day by appointment near the offices of the local board, discussed the matter again, and that Gruher then introduced Leicher to Dr. Bernfeld. Jacob Leicher took the witness stand and corroborated the testimony regarding this interview.

Gruher took the stand in his own behalf and flatly denied ever having discussed the matter of exemptions for money with any one. He admitted introducing the Leichers to Dr. Bernfeld, but said that he had done it at an exemption board meeting before a roomful of people and did it in the belief that the Leichers wanted to see the physician to discuss a physical ailment of the younger Leicher. Louis J. Schlessinger, counsel for Gruher, then called Cherey to the stand and asked him if, in the discussion of the question of taking a bribe from Leicher, Gruher had been mentioned as one of those to benefit by the bribe. United States District Attorney Knox objected to the question and argued strenuously against it. While Judge Manton was discussing a decision bearing on the issue Mr. Knox suddenly said:

"Well, I'll waive the objection."

The question was put to the witness again and he replied:

"I decline to answer."

"On the ground that it would tend to incriminate and degrade you?" asked Judge Manton. Cherey replied affirmatively. He declined to answer other questions on the same ground, saying that there was another indictment against him and that he would have to see his lawyer before replying. The trial, which is nearly ready to go to the jury, will be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock.

REGULAR ARMY HAS 10,000 OVER WAR QUOTA

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The regular army has now recruited nearly 10,000 men more than its war strength. On April 1 a total of 183,898 were needed to raise the army to war strength. Since that date, including the total of 1,124 taken in Saturday, the army has recruited 193,560 men by voluntary enlistment. The daily statement on regular army recruiting follows:

Man Killed at Camp Near Yaphank.

RIVERHEAD, N. J., Aug. 20.—One man, said to have been a carpenter, was killed and several men were hurt yesterday at Camp Upton, between Yaphank and Manorville. The names of those in the accident were refused at the camp, all inquiries being referred to Governors Island. The two-story barracks buildings are being erected on the sectional house plan. A section of a side is nailed together on the flat and then raised to position. Yesterday a guy rope broke and the section being raised fell. The man killed was alive when taken from under the débris, but died at the Thompson-Starrett hospital on the grounds.

Another man was hurt by falling from a scaffold in the camp yesterday, and another had both legs broken and crushed by being run over by a motor truck. The names were also refused.

JUDGE HYLAN TO STAY IN RACE FOR MAYOR

the Democratic candidate for Borough President of the Bronx and that Bruckner in Congress had voted against tabling the McLemore resolution, which would have warned Americans from traveling on merchantmen of the nations at war. The Judge asked his stenographer to repeat the word "McLemore," and then said:

"Yes, I'll answer that question. Come back at 2 o'clock and I'll have it ready for you." Promptly at 2 o'clock the candidate gave out this statement:

"The people of the Bronx, under the direct primary law, have the right to nominate for public office any one whom they see fit. I have no right to dictate to the people of the Bronx or any other borough what they shall do. The right of each community to select its candidate is the essence of democracy. I am an intense pro-American, and if the people select me in the primaries they will do so with that in mind. My chief concern at the present time is to break the strangle hold which the Foundations have upon the people of Greater New York."

Later in the afternoon the candidate decided to inspect the offices of the Business Men's League, from which he will conduct his campaign. He surprised a lonely clerk there, and for the next two hours the Judge had the offices all to himself, with the exception of the reporters, who found him there. The Judge talked somewhat, but still keeping a grave face and seldom smiling. He admitted that his designation had come as a surprise to him and that his chief ambition had been to go on the Supreme Court bench some day.

"Are there any specific circumstances in which you would withdraw and take the nomination for the Supreme Court bench?" he was asked. After calling in a stenographer he took down the question and answers, the Judge responded: "Absolutely not."

He admitted he had read the reports that his candidacy had stirred up considerable revolt among district leaders, but he added that he had received no information as to the accuracy of such reports. He said he did not believe there was any basis for them.

"Have you any comment to make upon the resignation of Thomas E. Rush from the Tammany Executive Committee?"

"None whatever."

"Do you think the reports will have a material effect upon your campaign?"

"I do not."

"Triumph of the People."

The Judge said he did not know Charles L. Craig, the Tammany candidate for Controller, and was not personally acquainted with David H. Knott, the candidate for Sheriff. He added that he did not care to discuss the makeup of the Tammany slate at this time. He said he expected to be attacked as the Tammany Mayoralty candidate, but until that time came he did not care to discuss it.

"It has been asserted that your designation was a triumph of McCooey over Murphy. Is that right?"

"I'll tell you what it is," said the Judge, warming up for the first time and ignoring the stenographer. "It is a triumph of the people. The people I have met tell me that it is a triumph of the people, and I shall stand by the people in the future as I have stood by them in the past."

Judge Hylan said it made no difference to him who opposed him in the primaries, but if he was defeated he would retire in favor of the successful candidate and heartily support him. A reference was made to the attacks the Judge had made upon Mayor Mitchel and he quickly replied:

"I did not make the attacks upon the Mayor but upon his administration."

The candidate would not be led into a discussion of the Brooklyn political situation or make any comment upon the action of Register O'Loughlin in running for Borough President against the McCooey candidate, except to say:

"That is a borough affair and the people of Brooklyn, under the direct primary law, have a right to nominate for public office any one they see fit. I have no right to interfere in this matter until we receive the verdict of the Democratic voters at the primaries."

The Judge smiled for the first time when he was asked if he believed that a lawyer should be Mayor of New York City.

"The Business Men's League has agreed with me," he said, "and recommended me for nomination to the Democratic Fusion Committee, and I have implicit faith in the judgment of the Business Men's League."

Leader McCooey declared yesterday that the reports that Hylan had been "persuaded" or forced to make way for some other man were "pure balderdash," circulated to stir up trouble among the Democrats.

"Judge Hylan will be the party's nominee for Mayor," he said. "There isn't even the shadow of a doubt about it. Those who know him well will tell you that he is not the kind of man that quits. He will receive the support of voters everywhere."

The fight on the McCooey borough and county primary ticket in Brooklyn was formally begun yesterday afternoon when United States Marshal James M. Power and Vincent F. Donlhee filed petitions, the former for Borough President, the latter for Sheriff. Power is the Democratic leader of the Twenty-third District, and Donlhee a Lieutenant of Charles F. Ward, leader of the Sixteenth District. They will carry on the fight together, backed by Ward, who is one of the strongest of the anti-McCooey leaders. McCooey says he is not troubled about the outcome. Power said yesterday that his campaign slogan would be, "Fair play, a square deal, and more Power for Brooklyn."

Tammany leaders who are as much disgusted with Murphy's selection of a candidate for Sheriff as they are over the Hylan designation have been trying to "get a line on" David H. Knott, the Shrievalty candidate, and announced yesterday that they had learned that he owns a fine home at Bell Avenue, Bayside, L. I., and lives there during the Summer. His city home and voting residence is in the apartment house at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street, which he owns.

The revolt against the Democratic machine in the Bronx got a new recruit yesterday, when Wallace F. Fraser, a lawyer of 2,806 Third Avenue and leader of the Thirtieth Assembly District, the Bronx, resigned from the Executive Committee of the Bronx Democratic organization. Fraser, it was said, has joined forces with Eugene J. McGuire, who heads the opposition forces, and is a candidate for Sheriff on the Fusion ticket.

SOLDIERS RESCUE MANY FROM A FIRE

ONE KILLED, TEN INJURED

Daughters of Aged Invalid Overcome by Smoke and Forced to Abandon Mother.

Soldiers assisted firemen in making rescues at a fire which destroyed the five-story apartment house at 111 East Ninety-sixth Street last night, causing damage estimated at $20,000. One woman lost her life and ten persons were injured.

The Dead.

The Injured.

KERRIGAN, JOSEPH, fireman of Truck 13, lacerations.

Meyer Amer, the lessee of the building, was sitting on the front stoop talking to his son, Daniel, and a friend about 7:30 o'clock, when he smelled smoke. The younger man ran into the house and discovered smoke coming up the stairway from the basement. He started down the stairs, when there came a burst of flame and he ran back and shouted to his father. The elder Amer shouted a warning to tenants.

The fire spread with great rapidity, and by the time the alarm had been given the stairway between the first and third floors was a mass of flames. Those who heeded the first call got out by the stairs, but some of those who delayed had to take to the fire escapes and get out over the roof.

Simultaneously with the arrival of the firemen about fifty member of the Sixth Division New York Supply Train arrived from their armory at Ninety-fourth Street and Park Avenue, led by Major George Robertson. A detail of the soldiers was at once sent to assist the police in keeping back the enormous crowd that had gathered. Later the soldiers were reinforced by another detail under Lieutenant Robert Guggenheim, a son of Daniel Guggenheim.

From the upper floors, cut off by the falling stairway, the cries of help could be heard, and Battalion Chief Fox had the space where the stairway had been bridged by ladders. Then the firemen and some of the soldiers fought their way up, and the work of rescuing those who remained in the building was begun.

Mrs. Commerford, who was 60 years old, lived on the fourth floor. She was an invalid. Her two daughters tried to carry their mother to safety, but were overcome and fell unconscious. They were found by rescuers and brought to the street. When they recovered they called hysterically for their mother and when they realized that she was still in the building they struggled to go back for her.

George McCarthy and Private Astin of the Medical Corps were passing when the fire was discovered, and both went into the building on rescue intent. The soldier was found cut by glass and suffering from smoke inhalation and carried out by the firemen. McCarthy brought a woman to safety and ran back into the burning house. He reached the third floor, where he, too, was overcome, and a few minutes later two soldiers stumbled over him and carried him to the street.

Karl Roman and Philip Schwartz, who lived on the second floor, got the families into the hall to find that the escape by the stairs was cut off. Some of them were taken down over the improvised stairs and the others got out by the fire escapes.

Fire Marshal Thomas Brophy said the fire started in the basement near the stairway, and was evidently caused by the careless throwing away of a match or cigar.

KILLED IN AUTO PLUNGE.

BUTLER, N. J., Aug. 20.—One man was killed and another severely injured at Smith Mills, near here, tonight, when an automobile lost a rear wheel and plunged over an embankment, dropping one hundred feet. In its plunge the machine tore away a section of a guard rail at the edge of the cliff.

Bert Amelamber of this place, owner of the automobile, was killed, and Thomas Berry, also of this place, who was a passenger, was taken to the hospital suffering from possible internal injuries.

KILLED IN PISTOL FIGHT.

Armed Men in Automobile Attack Party of Italians.

A call paid by seven Italians in an automobile last night on Joseph de Lucca, who keeps a saloon at 110th Street and Second Avenue, resulted in a fight in which one man was killed and three were wounded.

The dispute was caused, according to the witnesses who hid behind a parapet formed by sacks of potatoes, by the refusal of Joseph de Lucca to share his money with the joy riders in the automobile. The dead man was Joseph Secco, 29 years, laborer, of 242 East 110th Street, and the wounded were Dominick de Lucca, 22, driver, of 106 East 113th Street and Vincent Sucarato of 347 East 109th Street.

According to Anthony de Lucca of 2,135 Second Avenue, the men from the automobile tried to hold up his father for money in the saloon, and he ran to get a revolver. On his return, shooting commenced outside on the sidewalk, and about a dozen men were firing pistols. Secco fell dead, and after taking his gun away and carrying the body over to the drug store the men got in the automobile and drove away. Anthony told the police his life had been threatened some weeks ago.

When Patrolmen Carlo and Hunger arrived they found the dead man and the two wounded Italians on the opposite corner of the street and sent them in an ambulance to the Harlem Hospital. Anthony de Lucca was taken to the Third Branch Detective Bureau and further examined, and was later locked up on the charge of shooting Secco.

Shortly after the arrest detectives found Francesco Aita, a carpenter of 258 East 112th Street, hopping along Second Avenue toward his home with a bullet in his right leg and a pistol in his hand. He was taken to Harlem Hospital for treatment and then locked up at the East 104th Street Station on the charge of violating the Sullivan law.

SUBWAY SECTION TO OPEN.

The Public Service Commission announced yesterday that the operation of Fourth Avenue subway trains from Brooklyn through Canal Street and up Broadway to Fourteenth Street would begin on Sept. 4. With respect to the new operation, Commissioner Travis H. Whitney said:

"This is an extension of Brooklyn operation far enough into Manhattan to mean a great saving to Brooklynites. Because of the great industries around Union Square it will now be possible for thousands and thousands of Brooklynites to save a second fare in getting to that part of Manhattan Island."

ESTIMATE RISKS IN WAR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—That the risk of the fighting man is not nearly so great as is popularly imagined is the belief of Marine Corps officials here, who have compiled statistics covering the allied losses in the war.

A careful estimate shows that only one man in fifteen is killed, and one out of five hundred loses a limb. Recent reports from French and British hospitals show that about 95 per cent. recover from wounds, while 90 per cent. are able to return to the firing line.

While the Marine Corps officials hold unbiased views in regard to the expected casualties among their own troops in France, it is pointed out that the "soldiers of the sea" recently engaged in warfare in Haiti suffered less than 1 per cent. losses. These were suffered while covering a wide terrain, fighting from house to house, and capturing and holding small redoubts, taken one by one from the enemy. This method of warfare is said to be rapidly superseding the trench system on the western front.

INSPECT JERSEY SOLDIERS.

Sickness at Sea Girt Attributed to Anti-Typhoid Inoculation.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 20.—Brig. Gen. Charles W. Barber, in command of the division from New Jersey, Maryland, and Delaware, today inspected the camps here. He was accompanied by the medical officers on his staff and by health authorities from Sea Girt, who had had instructions to recommend ways to improve the sanitation of the camp. A diagnosis of the illness of three soldiers in one of the infantry regiments has not been completed, and since the men had not yet finished their anti-typhoid inoculation it was suggested that their ailments might be caused by the effects of the antitoxin.

It was the last official inspection by General Barber, who will relinquish command of the division to Major Gen. C. G. Morton, U. S. A., when the regiments reach their Southern training camp at Anniston, Ga. No assignment of command has yet been made for General Barber, but orders were received from the Adjutant General in Washington for all Brigadier Generals in the militia to report with their commands to the training camps.

WILL RESUME PICKETING.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The National Woman's Party announced tonight that it would resume picketing the White House gates this week. A statement issued from the headquarters of the party said:

"This decision has been reached by the leaders of the party because they are more firmly convinced than ever that they are within their constitutional rights in petitioning the President for a redress of grievances by their banners at his gate. Since the President has refused to see any more suffrage delegations, this is the only means left."

The leaders of the militant movement are expressing indignation over the treatment the six imprisoned pickets are receiving at the workhouse.

"No reporter," they complain, "is permitted to talk to the six women, who are held incomunicado."

FLAG TO HONOR LAFAYETTE.

Philadelphia to Display Emblem; Duplicate Will Fly in Paris.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Premier Ribot notified the President of the Municipal Council of Paris today that the Mayor of Philadelphia had sent through M. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, the duplicate of an embroidered flag that would be raised over Independence Hall in Philadelphia, Sept. 6, the birthday of Lafayette.

The Municipal officials have decided to fly the duplicate from the Paris City Hall the same day that the original is raised over Independence Hall.

INDICT HINDU AS PLOTTER.

Chemist Accused of Training Men for Bomb Work.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 20.—Indictments returned in this city yesterday charge Dhirendra Kumar Sarkar, Hindu chemist, arrested here Aug. 14, with training men in bomb explosions and conspiracy against the neutrality of the United States Government in setting on foot a military expedition against Great Britain while in the employ of the German Government.

Sarkar was arraigned tonight before Commissioner James Feeney, and his bail of $5,000 was continued. Sarkar went back to jail. Federal agents said he would be taken to San Francisco in a few days.

CHAIN OF CANALS FOR MIDDLE EUROPE

LINK WITH BAGDAD ROAD

By JULIAN GRANDE.

BERNE, July 7.—Seeing how woeful is the internal condition of Austria, as a perusal of even the censored parliamentary reports and the accounts of the proceedings of the Vienna City Council sufficiently prove, it may seem surprising that she should be thinking of constructing an extensive system of inland waterways. Nevertheless, this is the case, and last month a Wasserstrassentag (Inland Waterways Conference) sat for several days in Vienna, where it was resolved to spend large sums and make great sacrifices in order to connect the Austro-Hungarian rivers by means of a system of navigable canals and make the rivers themselves navigable whenever they may be obstructed or too shallow.

The main object is to connect the Danube and its tributaries with the rivers of Northern Germany, the Elbe, the Oder, and the Vistula, and thus connect Austria-Hungary with the Baltic.

The first remark which will be made by every one even slightly conoversant with conditions in the Hapsburg monarchy will be, where can the money be found for the realization even of plans on a much less grandiose scale than these? Austrian finance is more than $300,000,000 (1,500,000,000 kronen) on the wrong side, while now that the sixth war loan is closed, Austria's indebtedness is calculated at 660 kronen per head of population.

While this Inland Waterways Conference was sitting and laying such magnificent and extensive plans, we have a leading Austrian paper complaining bitterly of the general rottenness consequent on three years of no Parliament and rigorous censorship, years during which every ill weed has grown apace. Austria, with all of her population which is capable of bearing arms sent to the front, "unable to reckon upon war indemnities paid out of the enemy's pocket," (as one of her Deputies admitted,) with 34,000,000,000 kronen war debt, and more severely hit than any other country by the economic results of the war, this Austria would scarcely seem to be the country to embark upon such a project as that adopted by the Waterways Commission.

German Plans Unfolded.

Unquestionably German influence and German's plans for improving her own inland waterways and furthering her own trade have much to do with the fact of a people unable to pay their debts and whose finances are in a state of indescribable confusion, being busy discussing far-reaching internal improvements. It would not be Austria alone which would benefit by connecting Hamburg by water with Vienna, Bulgaria, Rumania, and the Black Sea. Unquestionably, also, the objects which Austria, with Germany behind her, has in view in discussing this vast extension of her inland waterways system and its connection with that of Germany, are not so much commercial as political; they are even very much more political than commercial.

Probably, also, the advantages of a well-developed system of inland waterways have been forced upon the attention of both the Central Empires of late owing to their great and increasing difficulties of transport during the war, difficulties due not only to lack of rolling stock and lack of men to repair and keep it in order and to add to it regularly, but to greater demand for rolling stock, and not the least to scarcity of lubricants. In England, perhaps, and certainly in America, it is not realized what a difficulty in both Germany and Austria-Hungary is the lack of oil and grease for locomotives and machinery.

Obviously there are great advantages in quick conveyance by water between Silesia with its mines and industries and Vienna, and between the Austrian capital and the coal fields and tin mines of Bohemia. A glance at the map shows how much of the Danube flows through Hungary, which, indeed, possesses just those portions of it most easily made navigable for steamers of large tonnage. No other material waterway in Europe, it is said, is so suitable for large steamer traffic.

The Austrian Inland Waterways Conference was preceded by a meeting at Linz, on the Danube, 100 miles west of Vienna. This meeting was attended by a goodly number of long-titled Germans, Mayors of the principal towns interested, and Councillors of various descriptions, besides the City Fathers of Vienna, a representative of the Austrian State Railways, and the witty, incredibly energetic and now doubtless incredibly harassed and overworked Burgomaster of Vienna, Dr. Weisskirchner.

Any one in the least familiar with Austrian methods will not need to be told that those attending this preliminary meeting disagreed among themselves, and disagreed upon a most important point, for whereas the chief speaker insisted on the necessity of first rendering the Danube itself navigable and deferring compliance with the special wishes of particular sections of the country until this had been done, two of the Viennese delegates insisted equally that the construction of the Denube-Oder canal was "a life-and-death question" for Vienna.

Link With Bagdad Railway.

The Inland Waterways Conference itself was held in Vienna, some 900 persons having sent in their names as meaning to attend it. Burgomaster Weisskirchner, in opening it, obviously spoke out of the fullness of his heart when he referred to a meeting being held to discuss the building of waterways and Danube navigation "in the midst of the wearisome daily task of scraping together and distributing our necessary daily food." A world waterway from the Rhine down the Danube and "to the ancient and long desolate homes of early civilization in Southwest Asia," he said, was a task worthy of all Austria's exertions, and one, moreover, which would be crowned by the Bagdad Railway and the railways of Asia Minor. English and American readers will form their conclusions as to this, and to help them to do so I need but remark that this conference was presided over by two Germans, (the Mayors of Dresden and Nürnberg,) and by one Hungarian and one Austrian.

What has now been decided is to proceed to the construction of five new waterways. As to the question of expense, that seems to have been discused but in delightfully vague fashion. One delegate remarked that Austria, despite her heavy financial burdens, should not shrink from expenditure on useful public works, and in the Austrian Parliament a few days ago a precisely similar remark was dropped. Such utterances create no capital, and where the 761,000,000 kronen are to come from, which the municipal architect of Vienna asserted were needed merely for the construction of the Danube-Oder Canal and one or two minor pieces of work, is not clear, even although 95,000,000 kronen have already been actually obtained.

Routes of Proposed Canals.

The five contemplated new waterways are as follows: First, a canal for large vessels, branching off from the Danube at Gänserndorf, (on the frontier between Austria and Hungary,) and going to Prerau, there dividing into two subsidiary canals, one going northwest to Pardubitz, Bohemia, where it could enter the Elbe, the other going northeast through the Silesian mining and industrial district, to Oderberg, just on the frontier of Silesia and Germany, where it would join the Oder. A third subsidiary canal would branch off at Mährisch-Ostrau, Moravia, in order to form a connection with the Vistula, and thus lead to Cracow.

Second, another canal, it is planned, is to connect the part of the Danube above Vienna with Budweis, Bohemia, and there join the Moldau. If the work is to be adequately performed, it will be necessary to canalize not only the Moldau from Budweis to Prague, but also the Elbe between Melnik, Bohemia, and Jaromir, which latter piece of work, we are assured, is already begun, the river bed being canalized, so that ships of 600 tons burden can navigate it.

The Austrians are manifestly especially anxious lest the suspicious outside world should imagine that they were embarking upon this costly and considerable undertaking just now in any way either at the dictation or suggestion of Germany. That all Austrians, whether from financial or political reasons, are not enthusiastic about the project is plain enough, if only from the silent, sullen attitude of some of the representatives of provincial towns at the Waterways Conference.

Danube Conference a Forerunner.

It is of course possible that this Austrian waterways conference may end in mere talk and resolutions, but the way was paved for it by a Danube conference held in September, 1916, in Budapest, when far-reaching resolutions were passed about making the Danube navigable from Regensburg, Bavaria, to the iron gates at Orsova. This conference was attended by 3,000 persons from a number of Austrian, Hungarian, and Bavarian cities and industrial and other associations, all interested in the improvement of Danube navigation and the development of inland waterways in Germany and Austria-Hungary.

It is significant that this earlier conference went the length of passing a resolution emphasizing the necessity of having a unified system of private law for navigation on the Danube and the waterways connected with it, "whereby it recommends the closest possible adhesion to the German inland waterways law."

Between September, 1916, and June, 1917, the Austrians have had time to reflect a little more upon economic rapprochement between their country and Germany, and there is reason to believe that in some quarters at any rate there is not much eagerness felt about it. In regard to the great Rhine-Danube inland waterway, for instance, it is urged sometimes that customs tariffs will form a considerable obstacle.

Germany seems to have made up her mind to some such increased utilization of her own and Austro-Hungarian waterways. She now realizes that, after the war, she may have much difficulty in pushing her wares, and therefore thinks that it might be well for her to be able to convey them speedily and cheaply to the Balkans and Turkey, receiving in exchange the agricultural products of those countries.

Possible Reduction in Rates.

A German engineer recently calculated that the freight by inland waterway from Cologne to the centre of the Balkans, a distance of about 1,560 miles, would amount to 8.67 marks per ton, and that it might even be lower in practice. Before the war the freight by sea for this journey amounted to about 14 marks. Hitherto there have been far more boats going up the Danube than going down it, consequently return freights have been difficult to procure, which is one reason why Danube navigation has been comparatively neglected. Were the Danube connected with the Main and the Rhine, it is hoped that this would altered.

Behind all these plans is undoubtedly Germany, and equally certainly German hopes—hopes that English goods may be ousted in Turkey, because with a Rhine-Danube canal it would be much cheaper to convey German goods thither, and also that in that future war of which Germans are still fond of talking, a Rhine-Danube waterway navigable for large vessels would make the Central Empires much more independent of British sea-power.

All these considerations appeared with the utmost plainness in the debate in the German Reichstag last March, when speakers, we are told, advocated the construction of the Rhine-Main-Danube canal for large vessels. Therefore, despite the poverty of Austria and her general disarray and disorganization, this project is one demanding the serious attention of both engineers and economists, and is no mere exeravaganza to smile at and then forget.

TESTIFIES IN WHEEL CHAIR.

Mrs. La Rue, of Cruger Case Fame, Tells of Blackmail Gang.

Taken before the Grand Jury in a wheel chair Mrs. Consuelo La Rue, who said she gave Mrs. Grace Humiston information which led to the discovery of Ruth Cruger's body, caused the indictment yesterday of a man and a woman who are believed to be the leaders of a blackmailing gang now operating along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The names of the indicted persons were not revealed, as they have not yet been placed under arrest. According to Mrs. La Rue, they are the very persons who tried to force her into a life of crime and from whom she made a desperate effort to escape when she jumped from the window of her home at 215 West Eightieth Street.

Before going into the Grand Jury room she had told the story to Magistrate Frederick R. Groehl and William J. Burns. Parts of it she had related some time ago, but her tale since then has acquired many additional features, including melodramatic incidents, pursuits, hair-breadth escapes, and underground cellars.

Parts of her story were corroborated yesterday by the manager of the Hotel Albemarle, and Mrs. Vera Ver Plank, with whom she lived at the Hotel Endicott. A representative of the Western Union also testified to a secret code which the blackmailing organization is alleged to have used in transmitting messages to various parts of the country.

PROF. E. H. CURRIER DIES.

Professor Enoch Henry Currier, for twenty-five years Principal of the New York Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, died on Sunday at his Summer home, Cannon Point, Lake Champlain, N. Y. He was born in Newburyport, Mass., in 1849 of English parents.

He was preparing for college when an accident to one of his eyes prevented his entrance. In 1902, however, he received an honorary degree of A. M. from Gallaudet College. He entered the profession of the instruction of the deaf at the New York Institution in 1872. In oral instruction he was one of the leading exponents of advanced and practical speech-teaching. He was especially interested in articulation and lip-reading, and in 1878 took charge of that department in the institution.

Professor Currier was responsible for the introduction of military drill into the training of the deaf, and the band of deaf musicians which accompanies the battalion at the school is a result of his studies in sound and vibration.

Directory Shows Business Growth.

The growth of the business in this city is graphically depicted in the forty-seventh annual issue of Phillip's Business Directory of New York City, published by John F. White of 5 Beekman Street. In 1915 there were 1,286 page of business classifications. There were 1,344 pages in 1916, while in 1917 the number of pages jumped to 1,528.

Crowds See "Retreat of Germans."

Large audiences witnessed the exhibitions of the motion pictures showing the retreat of the Germans at the battle of Arras yesterday at the Strand. At times the crowds waiting for admission were so large that the police had to keep them in line.

The films are produced by the Official Government Pictures, Incorporated, which controls the rights of British war pictures in this country. The receipts go to the maintenance of various war relief funds.

The most recent acquisition to the ranks of our producing managers, Arthur Hopkins, has already earned the reputation of being the most easily interested in novel and unhackneyed ideas. Last year he gave us the two plays of Clare Kummer—"Good Gracious, Annabelle!" and "A Successful Calamity"; and he has besides to his credit "The Poor Little Rich Girl." "The Deluge," which opened at the Hudson last night, fully sustains his reputation for unconventionality, but on the whole seems to fall in the category of his less successful endeavors.

It is an adaptation by Frank Allen of a play by Hennig Berger which had a considerable success in Sweden and Germany some seven years ago. It is what the doctrinaire of Broadway and way stations on the subway denounces as "not a play." But, in view of the fact that Broadway is entirely composed of theatres which are solely occupied in producting things that are plays, and in very rapid fire, there is a point of view from which to be "not a play" is a virtue. "The Deluge" is, in fact, a theatric anecdote—a most delightful genre, which includes "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," "Milestones," and most of the Barrie offerings.

And it is a very promising anecdote. The chance company in a saloon on the banks of the Mississippi are marooned by a sudden cloudburst which breaks the dam and inundates the city. They are rather bad average specimens of humanity—a promoter with a loud-mouthed grouch played by Robert McWade; a lawyer, played by Henry E. Dixey, who is addicted to spouting poetry whenever he is not operating his gullet in the contrary direction, and a gambler, Frederick Perry, who engineers corners in wheat and in the hearts of the fair.

Before the Deluge they jar and wrangle in good barroom fashion, venting pettey malice and ancient grudges. The speculator is a grafter who is responsible for the weakness of the dam. He is confronted with a woman of the streets, with whom he dallied in earlier days and who still, in her manner, rather tragically loves him; and he brutally discloses to her the fact that he is about to make a very successful marriage for money. A couple of waifs, who are driven in drenched by the storm, are browbeaten by all three, abetted by the proprietor and the barkeeper.

Then it dawns on the company that they are all in peril of being drowned like rats in a cellar. As the ticker stops, then the telephone is silent and finally the electric lights go out, remorse creeps over them and good resolutions rise for the future—which seems, however, more than problematical.

The mouthing lawyer discovers that not only brains are needed for a decent life but also character. The speculator realizes the vanity of his paper profits and discloses a real tenderness for the woman of the streets. The loud-mouthed grouch discovers that, beneath his envy, he really respects the others and feels for them as a brother. Even the proprietor opens up very substantially, in the matter of champagne. One and all gather hands in a circle and pledge all good-will and brotherhood. Regeneration!

Then the deluge subsides. Or rather, it appears that there has been no deluge. It was all the figment of their alcoholized brains. The promoter's grouch returns redoubled; the lawyer lingers a moment in the eloquent mood of brotherhood, but in the end goes off to his shyster case in court. The promoter fumbles clumsily for a means to do right by his Jane, but is quite properly rebuffed by her, and returns to his heiress. Then the proprietor caps the climax of disillusionment by presenting the bill for champagne. It is the Passing of the Flood in the Cellarage; and, unlike the people in "The Third Floor Back," these people sink further into the mire.

The cynicism of this ending is, potentially, natural enough; and, though it would in any case militate against financial success, that is a fact which only redounds to the credit of the producer. The real trouble with the play is far different. The purveyor of amiable romance, of plays of human regeneration, has a license—if only the license of financial success and simple hearts agreeably moved—to play fast and loose with the verities. But upon the cynic, if he is to be welcomed—and nothing is more truly welcome than Diogenes in his keener moods—rests the burden of truth in his kind.

Long before the real fact about the inundation develops it is evident that the deluge from which these people are suffering is of alcohol. Instead of a study of essential human nature, reacting first to terror and then to returning security, we have only the workings of drink upon characters feebly outlined. It is pessimism with the tongue in the cheek—or, rather, in the cup, and lapping vigorously. The scene of resurgent brotherhood has the character of glad handing over the commencement punch with classmates long forgotten and always neglected.

The production also seemed under a blight of unreality. The flood had presumably mounted above the windows; but a couple of mops at the threshold served to keep it out. Absolutely no idea was given of the position of the dam, the general lay of the land, and the probabilities of the impending disaster. Even more than the characters, the topography of the situation was dubious.

Naturally the acting suffered. The lines given to Mr. Dixey were quite maudlin; and even when he was supposedly living in a flash of his better self what he said was stuff and nonsense. Mr. Perry fared better, for he had a human situation to deal with. Mr. MacWade was gruffly effective, and at times amused the audience, but his method was, perhaps, of necessity, overemphatic.

The one woman in the piece, Pauline Lord, had the only real and sustained opportunity, and she rose to it ably. The pathos of the love of a woman of the streets seldom fails to affect an audience; but it must be said that Miss Lord played with rare sincerity and discretion.

Equally excellent in its kind was the minor part of the bartender, played by Clyde North.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Scrap of Paper," Arthur Somers Roche's and Owen Davis's new comedy, in which Robert Hilliard will be starred, has been placed in rehearsal. The play will be presented here by A. H. Woods next month.

Mary Nash returned to the cast of "The Man Who Came Back" last night at the Playhouse, after her Summer's vacation. The play passed its 427th performance last night.

The members of the "Daybreak" company will journey to the Goldwyn studios in Fort Lee this morning for a private exhibition of "The Spreading Dawn," the first picture for which Jane Cowl, one of the co-authors of "Daybreak," has acted.

Bessie McCoy, who quit the stage when she married the late Richard Harding Davis, has been engaged to appear in the new Century Revue. Miss McCoy was one of the most popular American dancers when she retired in 1912.

Harry James Smith's comedy, "A Tailor-Made Man," which will be presented here for the first time next Monday night at the Cohan & Harris, was acted last night in Atlantic City.

More than 4,000 seats for the premiere of the new Hippodrome show were sold yesterday, the first day the box office was open.

Albert de Courville, the London manager, who has been in New York for several weeks seeing current plays, yesterday signed a contract with Elsie Janis for her appearance in the British capital the coming Winter. Miss Janis will be starred in a musical revue probably at the Hippodrome.

JUMPED FROM FERRYBOAT.

Earl Lamoureux, 44 years old, a salesman, of 553 58th Street, Brooklyn, was removed to Bellevue Hospital last night, charged with attempting to commit suicide, and under observation. Lamoureux was a passenger on the ferryboat Nassau, bound from Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, to South Ferry. As the boat neared the South Ferry slip passengers saw him climb over the rail and jump to the water.

The motor boat Decoma, in charge of Captain Charles Johnson, took him aboard. When Patrolman Arnold asked his reason he replied: "My reputation is in Brooklyn."

FRED STONE'S NEW PLAY.

"Jack o' Lantern" has been chosen as the title of the new musical play in which Fred Stone will be starred in the Fall. The piece is by Anne Caldwell and R. H. Burnside, with music by Ivan Caryll, the trio that wrote "Chin-Chin," in which Mr. Stone was last seen here.

The supporting company will include some of the members of the original "Chin-Chin" company, Charles Aldrich, Douglas Stevenson, Helen Falconer, Violet Zell and the Six Brown Brothers among the number. Others in the cast will be Oscar Ragland, Harold West, Allene Crater, Edna Bates, Teresa Valerio, Alice Earl, May Marion, Lola Curtis, and Evelyn Conway.

Rehearsals have been begun and the piece will be presented at the Globe Oct. 15, after preliminary performances in Philadelphia.

"The Wanderer" at Manhattan.

"The Wanderer," Maurice V. Samuel's spectacular play, based on "Der Verlorne Sohn," was revived last night at the Manhattan Opera House, where it was first acted last Spring. Some of the original principals appeared again in their rôles, while other parts were taken by newcomers. James O'Neill, Nance O'Neil, Charles Dalton, and Lionel Braham continue in the parts they created. The title rôle, originated by William Elliott, is now played by Frederick Lewis. Jean Stuart has Florence Reed's part of Tisha, and Olga Newton is the new Naomi. These are the principal changes in the cast. The engagement will be brief, as the play is scheduled for presentation in the Philadelphia Opera House next month.

Louis Mann came to the Palace Theatre yesterday in a new playlet, entitled "The Good-for-Nothing," by Clara Lipman and Samuel Shipman, who have collaborated for the comedian on other occasions. The sketch is hilariously funny without meaning to be, mistaking bathos for pathos, and, except for Mr. Mann, is badly acted.

For the rest the program clings largely to favorites. The Dollys are still dancing, hurrah! hurrah! The Arnaut brothers have added some amusing pantomime to their regular act. Then there are Savoy and Brennan, real comedians; Ota Gygi, violiniste, and Bankoff and Girlie, dancers.

ADOLF BOLM GIVES HIS EXOTIC DANCES

Adolf Bolm, who was the "brains" of the Russian Ballet in its American seasons, as Michael Fokine was in Europe, presented at the Booth Theatre last evening his latest assembling of exotic dances, called "Ballet Intime," drawn from original sources as various as Russia, India, Java, and Japan. Among his associate artists, Roshanara led with a "Hindu Fantasy" in dark silhouette, danced to the air of the "Hindoo Song" that Alma Gluck sings, played on this occasion by Jerome Goldberg as a violin solo with orchestra. There were also Roshanara's "Snake Dance," "Ceylon Harvest," and an East Indian Nautch, with Ratan Devi, the British India singer, who on a platform before the footlights gave some of her own familiar and authentic folksongs and classics of the East.

Michio Itow of the Imperial Theatre, Tokio, staged his own "Wine Dance," suggesting the methods of modern Japanese art, and the "Fox Dance," in mask and eerie fantasy, recalling the courtly "Noh" dances of old Japan. The principal new production, recently rehearsed here before a tour of the Summer colonies from Washington to Newport and Bar Harbor, was Mr. Bolm's adaptation of Saint-Saëns's "Dance of Death" in the manner of the choreodramas of the Diaghileff troupe, with Rita Zalmani for a tiptoe partner, and Marshall Hall as the grinning Death, who tunes the fiddle and takes toll of the dancers at last, an idea congenial to that of the composer of the "Macabre."

Eva Gauthier sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the intermission. Marcel Henrotte played Schumann's "Carnival" for piano during briefer pauses, and in conclusion there were Bolm's "Assyrian" and "Prince Igor" dances from the Russian tour.

Some of those besides the stars in a long program were Mary Eaton, Mary Palay, Tulle Lihndahl, Janka Mieczkowska, Nina Artska, Louise Sterling, Bertha Selsky, Elizabeth Gardner, Edwin Strawbri, and Alexander Umansky.

Opera and theatre goers in about equal measure made up an appreciative audience, that applauded the presentation of a laurel wreath to Mr. Bolm, who hopes later to produce here an American dance after the "Red Mask" of Edgar Allan Poe.

TROUBLES OF TAMMANY.

In the weeks before the primaries and the real beginning of the municipal campaign, we hear, as from some No Man's Land in the dark, "confused alarms of struggle and fight." There is much talk of independence and "revolt" in Tammany. In Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx, Manhattan itself, rebellion shows its head. The candidacy of County Judge HYLAN for Mayor is opposed. Old "booms" are revived. Petitions circulate mysteriously. Dark threats of vengeance are heard in divers boroughs against the organization and its choices, and these are to be slaughtered in the primaries.

It would be a mistake for the friends of honest city government to take too much encouragement from all these feints and feuds. Tammany is held together by "the cohesive power of public plunder." Indeed, it is better for the community that it continue undissolved. We know what it stands for. Dismembered, its evil purposes might be cloaked. Its annexes, its sideshows, its outside co-operators and allies, masking their intent under names of less sinister connotation or virtuous import, are its dependence in trying to deceive the city and steal back to power.

In the work of "civic regeneration" a Tammany Mayor, however useful on general principles, is not indispensable. In the Board of Estimate and Apportionment he has three votes, the same number as the Controller and the President of the Board of Aldermen. The Presidents of the Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn have two each, the Presidents of the Bronx, Queens, and Richmond one each. Was the nomination of the obscure County Judge HYLAN not a blind to cover Tammany's strong effort for a majority, without him, of the sixteen votes of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment? "HYLAN against MITCHEL?" "Ridiculous," the good, easy Fusionist would say; and, prematurely made confident by Judge CROPSEY'S withdrawal, shirk the steady labor which it costs to beat Tammany, always a formidable opponent, and sure of much motley support outside the tribe.

Judge CROPSEY did a good service in calling public attention to the necessity of a Board of Estimate in sympathy with the Mayor. Otherwise a Mayor can do nothing "constructive." We must elect the whole Fusion ticket. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment is the cardinal and master factor of the City Administration. It is not a board at which the city can afford a Tammany majority.

Whatever present wranglings there may be about the allotment of the parts in the Tammany show, the genuine name of it is "Loot the City." The voters who remember the old characteristic Tammany scandals of maladministration and shambling inefficiencies and government for politics and pockets only; who have seen in the last three years and a half intelligence, trained methods, honesty, and energy introduced into every department, the creative transformation of the whole City Government, can hardly imagine the possibility of a return to the old régime; but they should not minimize the combination that seeks to restore it, or put too much confidence in the internal troubles of Tammany Hall.

EXPORTS TO SWITZERLAND.

A Swiss commission, which arrived in this country last week, is asking our Government for exports of food. We advise the members of it to read the very comprehensive survey, in last Sunday's TIMES, by Mr. JAMES LOUIS MOORE, of Switzerland's trade with foreign countries during the last four years. Mr. MOORE made his investigation in Switzerland, where he had access to all the official records. His assertions and comparisons are accompanied by the Swiss Government's figures. Like Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, since the beginning of the war Switzerland has greatly increased her exports of food to Germany, thus cutting down her domestic supply, and has sought to fill the gap by increased imports from the United States. A part of the imports thus received has gone directly to Germany, another part has been sent to that country in other forms—yarn and weavings from American cotton, for example—and the remainder, goods smuggled across the border excepted, has taken the place of Swiss products which Germany has bought.

The official reports show how much meat, live stock, butter, cheese, milk, and other kinds of food our enemy has obtained from the country which now appeals to us for more supplies. There is evidence that Germany, in the same way, has been aided by large quantities of American copper. Mr. MOORE justly says that when Switzerland so increases her exports and exposes her people to the risk of starvation, "relying upon the generosity of "the United States to supply the deficit," we must inform her that in time of war American interests come first. His personal conviction, based upon a year's study abroad, is that, while two years may be required for the conclusive defeat of Germany on the battlefield, she can be starved into submission in six months by an unyielding enforcement of the blockade with respect to all sources of her foreign supply of food and war material. He believes that she cannot survive another Winter if her imports from and through the neutrals are cut off.

We have heard reports that our Government has recently granted licenses for shipments of foodstuffs and fodder to Switzerland, although exports to Holland and the Scandinavian countries have been forbidden. These reports were current at about the time when a Swiss newspaper was seized and suppressed because it had commended the course of President Wilson. It should be added that the Swiss President has since expressed disapproval of this act of the Attorney General and restored the property. There should be no exports of foodstuffs, fodder, cotton, or war metals to Switzerland unless our Government has absolute proof that they will not help Germany, even indirectly. How can such proof be obtained?

OUR BELGIAN GUESTS.

The Belgian Mission comes to New York today. It asks for a quiet reception, as befits the representatives of a nation in mourning, ruined save in the impregnable lofty courage and endurance of its spirit, the martyr of freedom.

We do not know how far New York can limit the expression of its admiration for the Belgian people. The orphans of civilization, every free home is a family and a hearth for them. They would not yield to pitiless wrong. Vainly, but with a heroism that will be epic in all time to come, they resisted the invader. He has heaped agony on agony upon them. The history of the robberies, murders, ravishments, enslavements, the economic destruction of their country, fire and devastation—how the Germans spat upon international law, upon collective and individual rights, is known too well.

The bitter story is in every American heart. Today our Belgian guests can at least be glad that the wave of barbarism which overwhelmed them is receding. New York and all America are proud and thankful that Americans are to fight to restore freedom and independence and security to Belgium and to the world.

Not with words, weak to express the respect and honor due to Belgium, but by the swift and thorough prosecution of the war, by the deeds of our soldiers and sailors, will the American feeling for Belgium, the unconquerable of soul, be uttered adequately.

GEORGE L. RIVES.

The death of a citizen so active for many years in many fields of public endeavor as GEORGE LOCKHART RIVES compels a note of comment. Mr. RIVES had served the nation, the State, and the city well in many capacities. At the time of his death he was influential in the direction of many educational, civic, financial, and benevolent institutions. He was a lawyer of high standing at the bar. With all his other activities he found time to write, and at least one of his works, his book on "The United States and Mexico—1821-1848," is an example of historic writing that will bear the test of time.

It appeared in 1913, at a time when Americans needed just such a book, and the accuracy of the information it contains, the impartial presentation of the established facts in the relation of the two countries from the establishment of Mexican independence to the war with the United States, give it uncommon value. The chapter on the relative position of the United States and Mexico in 1821 is particularly noteworthy for its lucidity and the suggestion it contains of the power of democracy rightly directed. To produce such a work in the evening of a life so filled with varied responsibilities was a remarkable achievement.

REPEAL OF THE STAMP TAX.

The Senate's insertion of stamp taxes in the War Tax bill received general approval. Under the leadership of Senator LA FOLLETTE the Senate has dropped this source of $12,000,000 revenue, for no other assigned reason than that the stamp taxes are inconvenient and unpopular. The reason would be stronger if there were any tax which is convenient and popular in any greater degree than the stamp taxes. A substitute must be found for the lost revenue, and it is likely to be an increase of the war profits tax, already regarded as heavy, and sure enough to be increased without the creation of any greater necessity.

While we are suspending the enactment of stamp taxes France is enacting the proposal of its Finance Minister to impose a stamp tax of 5 per cent upon all sales. A stamp tax on purchases of necessities and luxuries alike is incomparably more inconvenient and burdensome than a stamp tax on commercial documents. It is to be remarked also that stamp taxes were approved by Mr. LOREE in his letters to THE TIMES, and by Mr. OTTO KAHN in his brochure on taxation. One referred to the precedent of the civil war and the other to the precedent of the Spanish war, both equally to the point. So far as the stamp taxes are justly annoying, it is because they are discriminatory. That objection would be removed by making them general.

In that form they would be a tax upon consumption, and consumption taxes have two advantages. They call attention to expenditure, and tend to check it. Also they tend to check consumption itself, and a check to consumption is the same thing as releasing the goods not consumed by the public to consumption by the Government. Even the consumption of goods not wanted by Government is a diversion from Government employment of the labor in producing the useless goods, but which otherwise would or might be employed in making war goods. A nation's war power lies largely in this power of diversion of labor from employments of peace to employments of war, and whatever increases this power of diversion reinforces the war power. On the other hand, a tax on production of war goods—the proposed alternative to the stamp tax—weakens war power. The Senate's action in this respect has sacrificed something of the Senate's prestige gained by amendments of the House's proposals.

ACTION AT LAST.

Whatever may be the merits or the outcome of the Government action against the I. W. W. disturbers in Spokane and Long Beach, the evidence which it supplies that the Government is neither asleep nor afraid will bring an immense relief to many doubting patriots. Treason, sedition, an impudent and arrogant enemy propaganda, with all these uncurbed activities the people have been made familiar daily for weeks and months. They have not been made familiar with any solacing evidence that the Government was more than observant of these things. The murmur of treason has grown into a roar. Save for the arrest of one or two German-American editors who went too far beyond the limits of Governmental patience, there has been no admonition of the only kind which defiant disloyalty will heed. As ordinary news of the day there has been steadily recorded the deliberate maturing of the plans for rebellion in the Far West. But there has been no news of a reassuring kind about the way in which the Government intends to cope with the snakes in the grass.

Now some news, at least, has come. It has a grateful sound in many ears. The Government, long suffering as it is, apparently does not intend to wait till it feels the German dagger in its back before it acts.

THE RETURN OF CAESAR.

The difference between the Roman Empire and all other empires is that the Roman Empire was universal. Its theory involved the gathering together of all the world, or all of the world that really mattered, into one family, which should be ruled by the City of Rome under the presidency of the Emperor. This ideal was attained. We have lived so many centuries in a society in which nations are independent of each other that we have come to regard that society as the only natural one; we have forgotten the principle of universalism and come to accept the principle of nationality as the only possible order for the world. We have forgotten that for a long time it was the principle of nationality that seemed strange and irregular, and the principle of universalism as the natural one. That state of mind existed long after the fall of the Roman Empire; men could not get used to nationalism, and kept looking for the revival of the universal dominion which had lasted so long and had made so deep an impression on the mind of mankind.

That impression has never wholly faded away. Its strength even in death was shown in the semi-revivals of universalism, such as the Empire of CHARLEMAGNE and the Holy Roman Empire, the latter being in theory as universal as the Roman Empire itself, though the fact never corresponded to the theory. It still lingers in the mind of WILLIAM II., whose heroes, as he tells us, are THEODORIC, FREDERICK II., and CHARLES V.: THEODORIC, who tried to continue the Roman Empire under German rulership; FREDERICK, who tried to make the Holy Roman Empire really Roman and not merely German, and CHARLES, whose aim was universalism under German hegemony. But, what is more important, the impression is not only deep in the mind of WILLIAM II., but the idea of universalism is the idea pervading the whole caste that rules Germany today.

The reason is simple enough. The theory, if not the fact, of universalism persisted in Germany long after the rest of the world had forgotten it. Nominally, at least, Germany was always ruled by the Holy Roman Empire, which in theory was the Roman Empire coming down in a continuous line from AUGUSTUS to FRANZ II. That empire was not destroyed until 1806, and after that Germany had never more than a makeshift Government until 1871, when it was gathered again into an empire. Only sixty-five years had intervened between the fall of the old empire and the beginning of the new. The old empire was universal in theory; it was, too, the only government Germany had known since Germany ceased to be populated by barbarian tribes. Naturally the German conception of empire was universal, and naturally the new empire began immediately to concentrate its thoughts on world dominion.

Therefore, it is that the idea of the Roman Empire, long thought dead, has risen from its grave in the twentieth century, and that the nations of the world are combined in a life-and-death struggle to thrust it back in its coffin again. The German mind, trained for ten centuries, can conceive of no empire except a universal one, or at any rate will have no empire but a universal one, and what WILLIAM II. aims to do is to put on his head the crown of AUGUSTUS and to dominate the world as he did, but from Berlin, not Rome. There can be no compromise between universalism and nationalism, for the idea of one excludes the other.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Two Pictures of Berlin in Wartime.

A part of the price to be paid by Germany after the war, and a part that must burden the German people for many a year to come, no matter what the terms of peace may be, will be exacted by the existence of books in which the country and its inhabitants are presented for the observation and judgment of the world. Not a little of the enormous literature created by the war is obviously and even avowedly ephemeral. It will soon lose interest and value, and be forgotten. Some of it has already done so. Much will remain, however, and not the least durable will be certain works of fiction written by skilled hands under the influence of a deep and sincere indignation. Two books of recent appearing, the probable permanence of which may well cause German apprehension, are "Christine," by ALICE CHOLMONDELEY, and "The Salt of the Earth," by Mrs. ALFRED SIDGWICK.

While neither can be called a "great" novel, they both would pass for well-told tales, even if it were not for their relation to the most important—the only important—happenings of this time. But the addition of this relativity, and the convincing plausibility of all their details, make it more than probable that they will long be accepted by everybody out of Germany as "documents" hardly less valuable—perhaps more trustworthy—than the "papers" of assorted colors that have been issued by the several belligerents.

The two books are widely unlike in everything except the impression they leave on the reader's mind as to what the manners and morals of Prussia's capital were just before and just after the war began. In "The Salt of the Earth" the assault is with a bludgeon, and there is no attempt to mitigate or qualify the arraignment and condemnation of a whole people. In "Christine" there is almost as much of laughing at the Berliners as of frowning at them—and the book will be for that very reason the more painful reading for those whom it describes and for their friends, if they have any. In "Christine," too, charity is carried so far as to credit one young junker officer with the power to see Germany as others see it, but even he in the end yields as docilely as the rest to the universal regimentation, makes no protest when his English sweetheart is insulted by his superior officer, and allows her to be harried to her death as she tries, without any effective aid from him, to escape to Switzerland.

Conviction Prompt and Just.

Justice MANTON'S expression of regret that he could sentence to only two years in prison the two draft officers who had confessed before him the taking of bribes will have many and sincere echoes from all citizens who realize—and that means all good citizens—the enormity of the acts committed by these men, the deep disgrace they have brought upon us, and how widespread are the effects of their crime.

That they violated their oaths and took money as the price of doing it is bad enough, but much worse is the fact that to the extent of their ability they weakened the offensive and defensive power of their country and to just that extent they served its enemies. Whether or not such was their conscious purpose, the sudden abandonment of their protestations of innocence prevented a clear determination, but that was the consequence of their action, and law and common sense alike hold every man responsible for the natural and presumable consequences of what he does.

On the other hand, the venality of these men strengthened among the people in the part of the city where they lived the already too prevalent belief that American officials are corrupt—that justice here is bought and sold, and that privileges and immunities are matters of secret barter. That belief comes as near to being wholly false in the United States as anywhere else in the world, perhaps, but it has survived from bad old days, and in those unfaithful examiners, evidently, as well as in those whom they exploited.

The promptness of their punishment will have even more of exemplary and preventive effect than its severity. One could wish that their start for the penitentiary had been direct from the court room. Of valid pleas for even a little delay they had not one, for they sinned against light, not in ignorance, as did most of their victims, and they did not earn mercy or thanks by confession. That was only a last desperate device to obtain some mitigation of deserved punishment.

Experiment Revealed the Facts.

It was long since settled—in many managerial minds, at least—that the tired business man, when he does not go home and to bed, the way other tired folk do, wants and insists on having a form of theatrical entertainment that delights his eyes and tickles his ears, but gives his mind no problems to solve and his heart no emotions to feel. As a promoter of histrionic art, therefore, the tired business man never received much credit from critics of lofty frontal elevation—elevation in the sense favored of architects—but he is an inarticulate person, the tired business man, and he has borne without protest the reproaches of those who must be his betters, as they say they are themselves, and they, if anybody, ought to know.

So far as is recorded, no vote on this subject has ever been taken among this class of the theatre's patrons, and there has been no really expert observation of their behavior while sitting out the plays provided for them. Something of uncertainty still remains, therefore, a careful scientist might say, as to what it, precisely, is the tired business man likes and dislikes. That illustrates the slackness of method that prevails in times of peace. War is different from peace in so many ways that no surprise can be felt on learning that, before making final selection of movie plays for presentation in the training camps, the wise purveyors thereof have taken pains to watch the men before the screens and to note what it was that fixed their attention and what forced or allowed it to wander.

The results have interest and something of edification. It seems that the soldiers-to-be like, after a hard day's work, not "sob stuff" or portrayals of melodramic moments in the warrior's career, but the stern realities of war faithfully depicted and the movements of troops going on about their various businesses of camp and trench under skilled guidance. That is not all. They also like romantic stories centring around curly-haired heroines.

In short, as the reporter of this investigation rather enigmatically puts it, "they want to be entertained." Therein they resemble the tired business man, but, more fortunate than he, they have been revealed as having brains, even when weary, and it has been disclosed that they prefer the actualities of life—than which none is more actual than curly-haired heroines—to artificialities and conventionalities. Great indeed is the experimental method! And possibly the tired business man isn't as dull and vacuous as hasty assumption has made him out to be.

Compares La Follette to Burr.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wonder if anybody can now doubt the wisdom of Mr. Roosevelt in throwing his hat into the ring in 1912 and thus saving the Progressive Party from being led by La Follette.

In the whole history of the United States, which I have studied intensively some twenty-five years, I know of none but Aaron Burr who seems to me to have been more ready to betray democracy for his own selfish ends than the little Badger Napoleon, the Senator from Wisconsin. When he stands up before the American people, and from his bad eminence demands, at a time when conditions and issues are changing every day, a detailed statement of the terms upon which this country will make peace, he asks the impossible, and he can have no other purpose than to discredit the general statement of our aims which President Wilson has already expressed to the complete satisfaction of most informed and intelligent people.

Like a demagogue, he knows the difficulty of explaining far-sighted statesmanship and of putting in set terms policies dealing with international affairs. Of that difficulty he takes advantage that he may befog the issue, and, as the "friend of the people," strut the political stage, the hero of the groundlings.

The following item may interest your readers. I received it in a letter from London:

A Canadian Colonel, a 'Varsity man, who has been in the thick of some of the biggest fighting * * * recently took a large number of German prisoners, among them a German Colonel who spoke perfect English, who asked:

"What are you going to do with me?"

Reply—Why, send you to England, of course.

German Colonel—Nonsense. You can't do that, for our submarines have surrounded England, and not a ship can get in or out.

German Colonel—Of course, they have to say they've just arrived! * * * Moreover, even if you could get us across, how could you feed us when you can't feed your own people?

My informant adds: "It is their implicit belief in the lies they are told that makes them so sure of themselves and makes our task all the more difficult."

Frightfulness in the German Press.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter of a clergyman to C. F. Goodrich, published in THE TIMES of Aug. 19, quite correctly states the relations of the majority of the German-Americans to their adopted country, the United States of America, and their Fatherland, Germany. One condition he fails to mention, that is: Not many of them ever return to Germany to live there.

I am German born, and come in contact in a business or social way with quite a number of my countrymen, and find but few as disrespectful or disloyal to our American Government as the bulk of the German-language sheets. They do not wish this country well; on the contrary, they are doing harm. As a matter of safety to our national welfare they ought to be stopped, if some way can be found to do so without detriment to loyal foreign-language newspapers.

It seems to me that, like the German Government, the editors of these papers printed in German woefully lack all understanding of the temper of the generally free and easy-going American people. Indeed, they seem to be bound to demonstrate that the only language they understand in this matter is "Force."

War and Fashions in Shoes.

Poor women! They would like to do something great for their country in these times of strain and stress, but how can they? They find themselves too terribly handicapped—or should one say foot-icapped?—by the silly shoes which they have allowed the greedy shoemakers to fasten upon them. As a means of advertising the fact that they belong to the class of the semi-helpless, their shoes are a great success—the deformities which they conceal, the chiropodist tells us, are just what might be expected.

I have been informed that the Chinese women, who, in taking on civilization, threw away the infantilism of deformed feet, are about to send missionaries to this country who will try to show American women the joy of being foot free, as well as the duty of being efficient in time of war.

Would Call Soldiers "Jonathans."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In hunting for a nickname for the American soldier it has seemed queer to me that no person should suggest "Jonathan" as a fitting title.

Just as back in the fighting days of 1776 the United States was called "Brother Jonathan," from Washington's constant consultations with Governor Trumbull of Connecticut, and as after the war the United States was considered the North American "Brother" in England, so now "Brother Jonathan" is sending his "Jonathans" over to the front to do a brotherly service for the men fighting for us.

COLLEGE WORK IN WAR.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been asked to give five reasons why young men under the draft age should go to college in war time. The following is the result:

First—Because the high school graduates who, under normal conditions, would go to college are now called in an imperative way to take the places made vacant by the large number of college men who have gone to the war.

Second—Because of the unusual demand for trained and expert service in the multiplied activities brought about by war conditions.

Third—Because the opportunities for well trained men in "the reconstruction period" after the war will far surpass any opportunities that have faced the young men of this country. Readjustment everywhere; extension in many diverse lines; pressure to make up for wastage of war; all these will be felt powerfully.

Fourth—Because the new opportunities in science and in civil and political leadership will demand the type of man the American college produces. This demand will be a large one, and it will be difficult to meet it.

Fifth—Because this generation must do its utmost to guarantee trained men for the next generation. The heritage of learning and scientific achievement must be handed on to those who shall come after us.

"Cosmos" Peace Terms Hold Good.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have re-read the "Cosmos" articles with still greater profit. There could be no more illuminating discussion of peace terms even today. And the first letter of Hall Caine also throws much light upon the whole subject of a possible peace. The present situation may be thus stated:

1. Austria-Hungary and Germany started this war for purposes of their own not then, or since, truly stated.

2. By a disregard of all law, divine and human, those countries have made war upon the persons and property of peaceful citizens of other countries until this country and many others have had to recognize this fact and act as all nations worthy of recognition as such must act under like circumstances.

3. The result is that the nations which started this unholy war see the handwriting on the wall and begin to cry out for peace.

4. Instead of having the courage to sue for peace, like men and soldiers, they seek to bring about peace by using underhand methods hated of all honorable men, not the least of which are bribery, intrigue, and seeking asylum, as of old, by the altars of the church they have desecrated, while they beg the priest to beg a peace for them.

5. Clearly the war should go on until those who started it definitely ask for peace, and state their terms, that the world in arms may see whether those terms promise a just and lasting peace.

6. The war has gone so far it should not stop until, first of all, it results in a peace that shall at least promise to end war for not less than one hundred years to come, that all people may turn from war to restore civilization to its own.

7. Armies and navies must be at once reduced to a mere world international police force that the billions a year thus saved may pay interest upon and gradually pay the great war debts of tens of billions. International courts must take the place of guns; justice must supplant force; the consent of the governed take the place of oppression.

On Sunday, Aug. 12, 1917, I sent a statement to the Committee on Nominations of the Schneider Committee advocating the selection of Thomas W. Churchill for Mayor. THE TIMES carried part of the statement Monday morning, referring to me as "a Citizens Union leader."

The statement came from me as an individual and not from the Citizens Union. Neither the statement as sent out nor your article could convey to any reasonable man the suggestion that the Citizens Union advocated Mr. Churchill.

However, as some misunderstanding seems to have arisen, I gladly take this opportunity to state the obvious—that the statement was mine as an individual and not that of the Citizens Union.

I am a member of the Executive Committee of the Citizens Union, but of course was acting as an individual. LOUIS H. PINK.

English and American Uniforms.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May a mother, who brought up her son to be a soldier when his country needed him, make a suggestion? Why must our American officers suffer in stiff collars?

When my son appeared in his new uniform his neck, encased in khaki and a stiff white collar, was held as in a vice.

Before me I have the photograph of an English officer. He wears a blouse turned back at the neck, with a soft shirt, leaving the throat free and giving comfort in every movement. Do our uniforms not sacrifice comfort for style? An order from some one in authority to adopt the English mode would bring comfort and relief to thousands of our American officers.

Highest Peak East of the Rockies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In regard to the discussion as to the highest peak east of the Rockies:

Neither of your previous correspondents is correct, for neither Mount Mitchell in North Carolina, referred to by N. Buckner, Secretary of the Asheville Board of Trade, nor Mount Washington approach by several hundred feet the altitude of Harney Peak, in the Black Hills of South Dakota, right south of us. As recorded by the Government at Washington, its altitude is 7,240 feet, and the Forestry Department of the United States, quoted by Mr. Buckner, will on inquiry tell you that it is the highest peak east of the Rockies, a point of which we are proud.

THE CALL OF THE OPEN.

Away with the books, for their office is done;
An end to all cramp and all tether!
Come, let us be kin to the wind and the sun,
And all the wild frolics of weather!

A truce for the day to all classical lore,
All borrowed consorting with sages;
To echoings vain from the dim nevermore,
And collects of vanished old ages!
Away now to oracle-haunts out-of-door,
And have done with the yellowing pages:
Yea, away to the woods and the hills and the shore,
Where Beauty her miracles stages.

So a fig for the desk and the pen and the tome,
Away with them all, all together!
For our kin on the winds are inviting us home

HERMAN MONTAGU DONNER.

Gorgas Creates a New Department for Service in France.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Surgeon General Gorgas today announced the formation of a new department of military orthopedics to deal with the large number of casualties which might be expected when the American Army got into action. General Gorgas explained that this step was taken because a very large percentage of the casualties of the present war, ranging from 30 to 40 per cent., required special orthopedic treatment, and also because it had been found that a large percentage, from 70 to 75 per cent., of cases could be restored to military usefulness. The department which General Gorgas has created will take the form of a special organization to care for such cases.

Major Elliott G. Brackett, M. R. C., has been appointed Director of Military Orthopedics. While the work will be under his authority, so much special organization will be required that the office of Director of Military Orthopedics for the Expeditionary Forces has been created and Major Joel E. Goldthwait, M. R. C., has been appointed to fill that position.

Associated with him as assistant directors, Major Robert B. Osgood, now with United States Base Hospital No. 5, and Captain Nathaniel Allison, now with United States Base Hospital No. 21, will be transferred from their present posts to this department. NAVY LEAGUE'S NEW PLAN.

Articles for Sailors to be Sent Now Through Washington Woman.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Secretary Daniels's refusal to permit the Navy League to contribute clothing and other articles for enlisted men of the navy as long as the league maintained its present officers was met today by notice from the President of the league, Colonel Robert M. Thompson, to its members and affiliated organizations that are helping it in its war work, to send articles hereafter through Mrs. James Carroll Frazer of Washington, "acting as an individual." This arrangement will apply only to articles sent to American sailors. The league will continue to forward articles to the men in the naval forces of our allies.

The Navy League asserts that more than 300,000 men and women have been engaged in supplying comfort articles for men in the navy.

Letters for Soldiers Must Give the Company and Regiment.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Mail for American soldiers in France will not be forwarded unless the addresses show the company and regiment or the name of the separate unit to which the soldier belongs.

Postmaster General Burleson directed Postmasters today to return to senders all mail not addressed in that manner. The American postal agency in France has been swamped with mail bearing such addresses as "Somewhere in France," "Care the American expeditionary forces," &c.

It has been found impossible by the postal authorities to undertake the location of men to whom letters are addressed without specific company and regiment designation. Postal authorities in France, England and Canada have taken similar action.

NAME JEWISH COMMISSION.

Dr. Bogen and Max Senior to Distribute Relief Money in Europe.

Albert Lucas, Secretary of the Joint Distribution Committee for Jewish Relief Funds in this country, announced last night that the committee, of which Felix M. Warburg is the Chairman, has solved the problem of the distribution of relief moneys in the war zones, and that a commission which has been accredited by the United States Government, has sailed for Europe to put the plan into effect.

The commission, which is composed of Dr. Boris Bogen and Max Senior, will establish in Holland a bureau of the Joint Distribution Committee, to be maintained during the duration of the war and for purposes of rehabilitation after the war, with such clerical and other employes as may be necessary to administer the relief work for the Jews in all the war zones and in Palestine.

The commission, through the new bureau, will co-operate with the Committee of Dutch Jews that has been formed in Amsterdam under the Chairmanship of Frederick Solomon Van Nierop, President of the Amsterdamsche Bank in Amsterdam. The Committee of Dutch Jews, acting with the bureau of the Joint Distribution Committee, will apportion remittances from the $10,000,000 fund and subsequent funds transmitted from America for the relief of Jews in the warring countries.

Dr. Bogen and Mr. Senior carry with them letters from the American State Department to the American Ambassadors in the neutral and allied countries, urging that they be given every opportunity to successfully perform the duties allotted to them. The establishment of this bureau in a neutral country will permit American relief funds to be distributed to the war sufferers in all the war zones, and is the first step of the kind which has been taken.

STOWELL REBUKES PEOPLE'S COUNCIL

The People's Council of America, the pacifist organization backing the demand for a statement by the United States of its war aims and peace terms, learned yesterday that it had made a mistake recently in sending a written appeal for support to Ellery C. Stowell, Associate Professor of International Law at Columbia University, and in addressing him as "Dear Member." Professor Stowell, in interviews and special articles, has frequently expressed his abhorrence of Germany's methods in the war, and is known the country over as being in favor of continuing the conflict until the Teutons have been punished for their atrocities. He made a frank statement of his views in addressing a recent meeting of the leaders of the People's Council at the Holland House, and he was greatly astonished, therefore, to receive one of the council's appeals to its members.

Professor Stowell then wrote the council the following reply on the letterhead of the Patrotic Service League, of which he is Secretary:

Aug. 19, 1917.

Dear Madam—I should like to know by what right you address me as "Dear Member" in your communication of recent date? I would cut off my right hand before I would sign myself a member of your organization, which is attempting to embarrass the Commander in Chief in the conduct of the war. Ambassador Gerard makes it plain that Germany was encouraged to have recourse to her barbaric unrestricted submarine warfare by the belief that this Government would endure everything rather than take up arms for justice.

Whatever the real purpose of your propaganda, its success can have but one result—to give aid and comfort to the enemy. Intelligent people are presumed to will, and therefore, to assume responsibility for the self-evident consequences of their acts. The consequences of your acts are treason!

ELLERY C. STOWELL.

Miss Shelly was not at 2 West Thirteenth Street yesterday, but Miss Lella Faye Secor, the corresponding secretary of the council, explained that in sending out so many letters and appeals as the council does, errors sometimes creep in.

"People are continually sending lists to the council to be used in sending out appeals," said Miss Secor. "Because of the enormous amount of work, it is not always possible to study these lists, and the appeals are sent out by workers who do not know the opinions of the persons addressed. However, there is no harm. It is always profitable to know how people stand, and the only way to find out is to ask. I admit, however, that Professor Stowell, of all persons, should not have been addressed as 'Dear Member,' and had we had time to look over the lists the mistake never would have been made."

Name Conference Leaders.

The council yesterday made public a partial list of the men and women who will attend its peace demonstration and convention at Minneapolis beginning on Sept. 1. It includes the following, who have been the "old reliables" of every meeting held by the council: Morris Hillquit, Max Eastman, Daniel Kiefer, and Professor David Starr Jordan. Others who will attend, according to the council, are Jane Addams, Dr. Judah L. Magnes, Scott Nearing, and ex-United States Senator John D. Works.

The subjects to be discussed, according to the council's announcement yesterday, are: The war aims and peace terms of the United States; the international extension of the council and the establishment of branches in other countries; constitutional rights; conscription; the economic phases of the council; taxation and the high cost of living; unofficial referendum of the people in matters upon which Congress fails to consult the people, and plans for a permanent organization of the council.

Miss Secor announced that the organization was in such shape that the delegates at the constituent assembly would undoubtedly agree on a platform of the permanent organization. She added that all questions to be discussed would be introduced from the floor of the convention and there would be opportunities for a full discussion.

Jacob Panken, Chairman of the Workmen's Council, which is the labor wing of the People's Council, issued a statement yesterday attacking the rival conference at Minneapolis called by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

"The growth of the Workmen's and People's Council in membership from the working class of the country cannot better be attested than by the attitude of Samuel Gompers and other officials of the American Federation of Labor," said Mr. Panken. He added that the apparent purpose of Mr. Gompers in calling a rival conference was to confuse the minds of the workers of the nation, and to "cover up the surrender to the forces of reaction just completed by Mr. Gompers and his associates."

"We have little to fear from the competitive conference called by this organization," went on Mr. Panken. "There is no fuller democracy than that for which the Workmen's Council stands, and it would not surprise me to see a larger desertion from the American Alliance to our ranks."

Said President Should Be Hanged.

Adolph Deutsch, a youthful soap-box orator, was arrested yesterday after he had asserted in a harangue at Madison Avenue and Twenty-third Street that President Wilson should be hanged for his part in the war. Deutsch, who was arrested two weeks ago at the same corner for obstructing traffic, illustrated his speech by pointing out pictures in The Masses, laying particular stress on a picture of women being shot from a cannon's mouth. George J. Debelius, an electrician in the navy, asked Policeman Bornkessel of the East Twenty-second Street Station to arrest Deutsch, who was later arraigned in Yorkville Court and held in $50 bail on a charge of disorderly conduct. His trial was set for Friday.

Ask Aid in Fight on Treason.

The American Defense Society sent a letter yesterday to Harry Simpson, Secretary of the Hotel Men's Association, asking him to use his influence in having foreign language newspapers and magazines printing sedition excluded from hotel newsstands.

The society issued an open letter to the public yesterday appealing for support in suppressing soap box orators, sedition, and disloyal agitation everywhere.

Cleveland Moffett, the writer, had a conference with Mayor Mitchel yesterday afternoon on the subject of soap box orators and sedition. Mr. Moffett told reporters later that Mayor Mitchel had agreed that some sort of Congressional action was necessary. A representative of the Mayor would attend a meeting of the Vigilantes tonight, it was said, and help in the discussion of a future policy as regards the street talkers.

AIRCRAFT MERGER STATUS IN DOUBT

WAR OFFICE STILL SILENT

Inquiries from Aeronautical Society to President and Secretary of Navy Also Answered.

The Aeronautical Society of America, which at a special meeting last week expressed disapproval of the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association, the combination recently formed for the cross licensing of aircraft patents, yesterday received a reply to one of the inquiries it had made as to the truth in the report that the combination had Government sanction. The Federal Department of Justice informed the society that no such matter had been sanctioned by that department. Inquiries addressed to the President, the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Navy have received no response as yet.

"Whereas, statements given out by the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association to the public press and to private individuals have created the widespread impression that the United States Government officially favors their plan of cross-licensing under certain aircraft patents; and

"Whereas, The Aeronautical Society of America has been advised by a special committee that such a plan is productive of an aircraft trust; therefore this society begs to be informed whether it is true that the United States Government has through you officially sanctioned such combination. If it is a fact that the official sanction of the United States is behind this plan, then this society shall deem it a patriotic duty to refrain from further action herein pending present war conditions."

The following message was received yesterday by Mr. Barker from G. Carroll Todd, assistant to the Attorney General:

"The department has received your telegram of the 14th instant, making inquiry of the accuracy of statements alleged to have been given out by the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association to the effect that the United States Government looks with favor upon a plan of cross licensing under certain aircraft patents. No such arrangement as you describe has been sanctioned by this department."

Mr. Barker, in commenting upon the telegram, said:

"The whole aim of the society is to aid in the development of the art of aviation, and particularly at this time to help production for war needs. We do not believe, however, that the cause of aviation will be best served by the merger of patent interests contemplated by the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association; in the first place, because we believe that to be an illegal combination, and secondly because the compulsory tribute to the Wright and Curtiss patents which is contemplated is naturally obnoxious to inventors and others interested, who are practically ignored, and who do not recognize the right of an arbitraary assessment under these patents.

"The owners of the Wright patent, in all the years of their contest with Curtiss, have not brought him to an accounting, and I do not believe that any Curtiss patent has been adjudicated.

"We have no objection to a manufacturers' association in aircraft, and believe such an organization on proper lines to be a good thing. In fact, if the present association will purge itself of objectionable features and make itself a real association of aircraft manufacturers for mutual assistance in expediting war work, without attempting to give extraordinary privileges to a few, the society will heartily support it as being to the best interests of the art.

"It has been said on behalf of the association that it has in view after-the-war conditions in aircraft, and it looks to me more and more like a repetition of the patent trust of early automobile days. Of course, mistakes must be made when one is in a hurry, and we are in a hurry to furnish lots of airplanes for training our airmen, and for our allies. But let that not be an excuse for patching up differences between rival aircraft manufacturers at the expense of the public purse and to the extinction of all other inventors' rights and public enterprise."

INQUIRY INTO BABY'S DEATH.

In investigating the death of the two-year-old child of Isadore Wisotski of 544 East 136th Street, after the infant had been returned by mistake of a convalescent home to an Italian family that also had a baby in the home, District Attorney Martin of the Bronx yesterday asked William Daub, Superintendent of the Lebanon Hospital, to attend the hearing today. The Wisotski baby was sent from the Lebanon Hospital to the convalescent home at Sea Cliff, L. I., by the Labanon Social Service Department, and representatives and nurses of those institutions have also been summoned.

Mr. and Mrs. Wisotski yesterday repeated the story of the death of their baby to Assistant District Attorney Cohen as they had told it to the Coroner on Sunday. They described in detail how they found their baby dying from starvation and lack of care in the rooms of an Italian family at First Avenue and Sixty-first Street.

THE BELGIAN MISSION GETS BIG WELCOME

There arrived at the Pennsylvania Station at 11 o'clock last night the Belgian Commission, consisting of Baron Moncheur, Minister on Special Mission and Chief of the Mission; Mr. de Carter de Machrenne, Belgian Minister at Washington; Lieutenant General Leclercq of the Belgian Army, Major Osterrieth, Hector Carlier, Count d'Ursel, and Jean Mertens. They were accompanied by Warren D. Robbins, representing the State Department; Captain T. C. Cook, U. S. A., military aid to General Leclercq; James G. Whitely of the Belgian Legation, and Special Agent O'Connell of the State Department.

The party entered a number of automobiles bedecked with flags at the Pennsylvania Station and crossed Thirty-third Street to Fifth Avenue, which was specially lighted, decorated with flags and crowded with thousands of people, one of the largest gatherings that ever turned out at that hour of the night in the avenue.

All the way up Fifth Avenue to Fifty-ninth Street the procession of automobiles was cheered by thousands, and the visitors were kept busy acknowledging salutes. At Fifty-ninth Street the party went west to Broadway and drove down Broadway, again cheered by crowds, especially as they entered Times Square, when the character of the automobile procession was recognized on account of the mingled Belgian and American flags on the machines. At Forty-fourth Street the party turned east and went directly to the Hotel Biltmore, where they were taken at once to their rooms.

A warlike flavor which the other receptions to commissions from abroad did not possess will be given today to the ceremonies in honor of the Belgians when they reach the City Hall, where the only official program of entertainment to the distinguished visitors is to be carried out. The Seventh Regiment, with a band, will form a guard of honor at the City Hall, and there will also be 500 sailors from the navy yard and 200 marines. These will be supplemented by the American Junior Naval Scouts and Boy Scouts. On the way up town the mission will have another guard of honor in the Seventy-first, the Twenty-third, and First Regiments. The presence of the soldiers in the city was seized upon by the Mayor's committee having the reception in charge to give the affair a military aspect.

This morning the mission will leave the Biltmore at 9 o'clock to go to 120th Street and the East River, where it will embark on the police boat Patrol for the Battery. An escort of the Mayor's Committee, mounted police and Squadron A, National Guard, under the command of Major Gen. Appleton, Grand Marshal, will take the mission from the Battery to the City Hall, where Mayor Mitchel will meet them at 11:30 o'clock and tender them an official welcome on behalf of the city. The speakers will be the Mayor, Frederic R. Coudert, and Baron Moncheur, the head of the Mission.

From the City Hall the visitors will be escorted to the Biltmore Hotel, the route being along Park Row to Centre Street, to Lafayette Street, to Fourth Street, to Washington Square, where a stop will be made to permit the presentation to the mission of a Belgian flag by the employes of John Wanamaker, thence to Fifth Avenue, to Forty-fourth Street. Fifth Avenue, from Fourteenth Street to Forty-fourth Street, will be lined by a Guard of Honor, under the command of Brig. Gen. William G. Bates, Second Brigade, Sixth Division. This guard of honor will consist of the Seventy-first Regiment, commanded by General Bates himself; the Twenty-third Regiment, commanded by Colonel F. L. Norton, and the First Regiment, commanded by Colonel Jennings.

After the mission has passed the right of the line of the troops it will proceed to the Biltmore Hotel under police escort, while the troops will wheel into column and parade up the avenue to Fifty-seventh Street, to Broadway, to Seventy-second Street, being reviewed en route at the Union League Club by Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan and ex-Gov. Hughes, President of the club. Between Thirty-fourth and Forty-second Street 10,000 small Belgian flags will be distributed among the onlookers. The mission will lunch privately at the Biltmore Hotel, and at 2:30 o'clock will start for a trip to Long Island, accompanied by an escort of the committee from the Mayor's committee, the route being over the Queensboro Bridge. The party will go through Prospect Park, Brooklyn, and along the Ocean Parkway to Coney Island. Returning, it will reach Manhattan by way of a special ferry from Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn. It will land at West Forty-second Street and proceed direct to the Biltmore.

In deference to the expressed desire of the members of the mission that the program of entertainment be simple, no arrangements have been made for an official public banquet, as in the case of the other visiting massions. The Executive Committee, as individuals, will give a private dinner at the Ritz-Carlton in the evening, which will not be in any sense an official function of the city. The mission will leave the city tomorrow.

STRIKE AT DELAWARE YARD.

300 Metal Workers Out at Pusey & Jones's Ship Plant.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 20.—More than 300 metal workers employed in the shipyards of the Pusey & Jones Company walked out today. Following a meeting of the Local Union of Boilermakers and Iron and Steel Shipbuilders tonight, it was said that there would be a complete tieup of other local shipyards unless the trouble were adjusted.

The employes have given the company until Wednesday to agree to their demands. They say they were prompted to act because the company would not discharge a workman who had refused to pay his dues in the union, and that they also have asked for more pay.

While they deny the walkout is in connection with reported orders for a general strike at shipyards in the East, they say if they go out on strike every shipyard on the Delaware River will be tied up.

JAPANESE EDUCATORS DIE.

TOKIO, Aug. 20.—The death is announced here of Baron Dairoku Kikuchi, Professor Emeritus of the Imperial University of Tokio and Kyoto, and Baron Toru Iwamura, former Professor in the Tokio Fine Arts School, who represented Japan at the St. Louis International Exposition.

Baron Kikuchi, who lectured in Carnegie Hall, New York, in 1910, was born at Yedo, near Tokio, in 1855, and was educated at Kaiseijo, Yedo, at the University College School, London, and St. John's College, Cambridge. He was Professor of Mathematics in the Imperial University of Tokio from 1877 to 1898. He was made Dean of the Science College there in 1881, and in 1898 was made President of the Tokio Imperial University. He was Vice Minister of Education from 1901 to 1903. He has been a life member of the House of Peers since 1890 and a member of the Imperial Academy, Tokio, since 1889.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The "unwritten law," whereby a man may kill his wife's seducer, was recognized by an English jury today almost for the first time within the recollection of the English public.

"Justifiable homicide in self-defense," was the verdict rendered by a London Coroner's jury in the case of Lieutenant Douglas Malcolm, who shot and killed a foreigner, Anton Baumberg, styling himself as "Count Deborch."

Lieutenant Malcolm, who was a wealthy young merchant before the war, returned on leave from France, and found his wife with the so-called Count. He attacked the "Count," and afterward challenged him to a duel, but the "Count" ignored the challenge. Malcolm visited the "Count's" London lodgings, and other lodgers testified to hearing a struggle followed by a revolver shot. They found the "Count" dead.

After leaving the premises Malcolm surrendered to the first policeman he met. He testified before the Coroner's Jury relative to Deborch's actions, but did not suggest self-defense in killing the man. Malcolm's wife admitted her delinquency.

It developed that Deborch was for a brief period in service with the Officers' Training Corps, but that he was under police suspicion of being an international spy, and was listed by the police as a professional spy.

DR. GARDNER SEIZED AGAIN.

New Charges of Drug Selling Made Against Physician.

Evidence said to have been furnished by 100 men and women who called at his office between 6 and 8 o'clock last evening and asked to be supplied with prescriptions for various drugs, resulted in the arrest last night of Dr. Edward E. Gardner of 245 West Fifty-first Street, on a charge of violating the drug law. Assistant United States Attorney Edwin M. Stanton, Marshal McCarthy, and agents of the Internal Revenue Department also took into custody Miss Helen Renaud, the physician's Secretary, accused of being an accessory, and six young men who had called for drug prescriptions and failed to produce registration cards. Of these one was liberated after a messenger had brought his card from his home, but the other five, Miss Renaud and Dr. Gardner were locked up at the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station.

Dr. Gardner was arrested on a similar charge on last Thursday and was released in $5,000 bail. Attorney Stanton told him last night that he would ask $10,000 bail additional on the second arrest.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

WARD PUTS OUT VOSHELL

Garland of Pittsburgh Defeats Both Mahan and Behr in Opening Rounds of National Singles.

Away back in 1904 the national singles tennis championship was won by Holcombe Ward, inventor of the American twist service. Yesterday, after a lapse of thirteen years, this same player, calling to his command much of the skill for which he was then famous, brought about a startling upset in the first round of the national singles tournament at the West Side Tennis Club, at Forest Hills, when he defeated one of the most formidable contestants in the event, S. Howard Voshell, in a wonderfully played three-set match, the score of which was 6—4, 1—6, 6—3. It was a result as astonishing to the spectators as it was to Voshell, who found his severe game utterly worthless before the court strategy and remarkable volleying of his opponent.

Craig Biddle's Craft Wins.

This was not the only surprise which marked the opening rounds of the annual tournament. It was a day of sad reversals for those who act the part of soothsayers in tennis events. Voshell was the first of the present day stars to fall, but after him came tumbling such men as Frederick B. Alexander, Karl H. Behr, Theodore Roosevelt Pell, Fred C. Inman, and Irving Wright, and in each instance the result was hardly less astonishing than Ward's victory over Voshell. With such men as these toppling from their pedestals it began to look as if the acknowledged rulers of the courts were to be dethroned by veterans, supposedly far past their prime, and youngsters just budding into the fullness of their tennis skill.

It was one of the veterans who brought the downfall of Alexander, none other than the famous Philadelphian, Craig Biddle. He triumphed over the former internationalist in a three-set match at 6—1, 2—6, 6—0, which is surprising in its completeness. It is undeniably true that Alexander is far overplayed, but the crafty and effective game set forth by the Philadelphian would have pressed him at his best.

The brilliant young Pittsburgh youth, Charles S. Garland, had to his credit two remarkable victories, starting with Lyle E. Mahan in the first round and ending with Karl H. Behr, a former internationalist, in the second. Behr, while he has only played a small amount of tennis this season, and that only in exhibition contests, was supposed to have at his beck and call skill enough to work his way well along toward the final round. The clever placing game as exemplified by Garland wrecked such predictions. Behr was a bit wild, and before the steadiness of his opponent was completely outplayed. He could neither smash with certainty nor drive consistently, and Garland waded through to a victory at 6—2, 6—4, after having disposed of Mahan at 6—1, 7—5.

Tilden's Attack Beats Pell.

Pell's vaunted backhand and the general excellence of his game were only chaff before the whirlwind attack of W. T. Tilden, Jr., of Philadelphia in the second round of the tournament. The Quaker City expert in a national mixed doubles championship team has the speed of the accepted type of Californian game, and his terrific service and driving beat Pell down without much ado. Streaking placements that tucked themselves out of reach of the famous backhander brought his downfall in straight sets at 6—3, 6—3. Pell could neither volley the hard driving nor play it off the ground, and his best efforts were unavailing to stem the tide of defeat which was engulfing him.

Fred C. Inman had to give way before the attack of Harry S. Parker in the first round at 6—1, 6—3, and Parker was in turn beaten in the second round by Holcombe Ward. The conqueror of Wright was another youthful contender, Leonard Beekman, whose play has in each succeeding year shown greater promise. This contest was carried to a long match, Beekman winning at 5—7, 12—10, 6—2. Wright, a master of the chop stroke, used this weapon effectively at all times, and the contest wavered in the balance until the final point had been finished off.

The playing of the first two rounds of the event yesterday leaves only sixteen contestants to fight it out for the final honors. While many of the leading lights in tennis were among the vanquished, there still remain a galaxy of stars in each half of the draw. In the upper half the players who come through the opening clashes are Robert Lindley Murray, W. T. Tilden, Jr., Dean Mathey, Craig Biddle, John R. Strachan, A. W. Macpherson, Douglas Watters, and Charles S. Garland. In the lower half the names appearing are Holcombe Ward, Nathaniel W. Niles, R. M. Beck, Clarence J. Griffin, Harold Throckmorton, Watson M. Washburn, Leonard Beekman, and Richard Norris Williams 2d, the present national singles champion.

Williams in Fine Form.

It will be noted from this that while many stars fell in yesterday's fray, the members of the first ten of a year ago who are competing in the tournament are all settled in advanced brackets. The only one who is out is Joseph J. Armstrong, and he defaulted his first round match.

Taking into consideration the fate that befell some of the best-known men in tennis yesterday, however, it is not unlikely that more surprises will ensue today. The tournament is just as much as ever in a puzzling stage, with no player, unless it is Williams, standing out head and shoulders above the others on present effectiveness. The spectators wandered from court to court yesterday estimating possibilities, and when the play for the day ceased were almost as much in doubt as ever.

It is true that Williams played some excellent tennis; in fact, it was remarked by several that as far as they could see, going to Plattsburg, with all the inactivity that it entailed, had not in any way impaired the champion's game. Williams tested strength in two rounds yesterday afternoon with players of lesser calibre and in each instance swept along to victory in a way that was convincing evidence of his skill. In the first round he was pitted against Walter L. Pate, and his stinging service and sharp placing down the lines and across court soon gave him the victory at 6—2, 6—2. Against L. G. French in the second round Williams triumphed at 6—3, 6—2.

It is coming to be the belief now that Robert Lindley Murray may force his way through the upper half of the draw to fight it out with Williams in the final. As was the case with Williams, however, Murray did not have a hard match yesterday. In the frst round he advanced by reason of a default and in the second defeated H. L. Westfall at 6—2, 6—2.

Japan's Representative Weak.

The entry of the Japanese player, Kashio, was by many taken to mean that there was to be from the land of Nippon a contestant of the calibre of Kumagae. Kashio, however, went down to defeat in the second round of the tournament, after having worked his way through the first round with the greatest difficulty. His first clash was with F. Browne Ransom, and had the latter been a bit steadier he might not have been forced to give over the match at 7—9, 7—5, 10—8. In the second round the Nipponese was easy prey for Douglas Watters of New Orleans, who won at 6—3, 6—4, a sustained net attack being more than the Japanese could withstand.

The match between Ward and Voshell was the real attraction of the day, and had the officials but known what was in store they would have placed it well along in the afternoon instead of having it played early in the morning. The analysis of Voshell's defeat shows that it was caused primarily because Ward would not play a severe game, and also because the veteran raised few of his shots high enough to give Voshell's smashing racquet the opportunity for a kill. Ward chopped his strokes all the time and mixed pace and direction with such disconcerting ease that Voshell was in a maze, not knowing what to expect next. Ward had an uncanny knack of placing with infinite precision to his opponent's forecourt, and when Voshell's game softened he was instantly at a disadvantage.

Ward's Puzzling Play.

It seemed as if every shot that Ward played over the net was the result of a carefully laid plan, and all of them had some kind of a twist to make them puzzling, whether taken on the bound or on the volley. Voshell started service, and the ease with which Ward handled his severe stroking might well have caused a tremor of doubt to cross the mind of the indoor champion. Ward broke through with the precise placements always at his command and took the second game on his own service. The contest then went to 3 to 2 in Voshell's favor, and a few turned away as if this was the sign of victory. Ward, however, was far from being defeated in this set. He pulled even at three all and then romped away with the match.

Voshell secured an early advantage in the second set, and Ward, instead of struggling against the handicap, was content to let the set go without much opposition on his part, reserving his strength for the last set. A long deuce game opened this and another followed, both being won by Ward. From this lead he forged ahead to lead at 5—2, and it was here that he showed his most remunerative bit of crafty play.

The eighth game saw Voshell serving, and when he took the first two points Ward did not make any effort to stem the attack, but reserved himself for the next game on his own service. He twice was within match point, but a miss of a kill that seemed sure drew the game to deuce and it appeared as if Voshell might pull it out. A sharp volley on the first return of service, which, by the way, always bothered Voshell, gave Ward the vantage point, and when he drove to Voshell's backhand on the next point the indoor champion slapped the ball into the net for the point that gave Ward the victory.

Miss Bjurstedt Wins.

The final match of the day brought together, not the men, but two of the foremost women players of the country, Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss Mary K. Browne. The contest was a continuation of the series which started at Greenwich not long ago for possession of the Julian S. Myrick trophy. Miss Bjurstedt was the victor yesterday in a skillfully played three-set match, the score being 7—5, 3—6, 6—3. The Norse girl was playing a formidable game, with her severe forehand drive working effectively in keeping Miss Browne away from the net position. Off backhand, too, Miss Bjurstedt was dependable, and while it appeared that Miss Browne was not possessed of quite such great skill as in some of her other matches with the national champion, Miss Bjurstedt deserves great credit for the victory.

Great American Handicap Delayed.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—A heavy downpour of rain delayed the program of the Great American Handicap shoot, which opened today at the South Shore Country Club, but preliminary events for both professionals and amateurs showed some excellent scores. In the professional shoot Homer Clark of Alton, Ill., broke 99 out of 100 targets, taking first place. Frank M. Troeh of Vancouver, B. C., with a score of 199 out of a possible 200, was first in the amateur event.

SANFORD'S HORSES LEAD AT SARATOGA

SARATOGA, Aug. 29.—It was an old-fashioned day for the Sanford stable today, the purple and gold stripes flashing to victory in two events, the principal success being in the Kentucky Selling Stakes for two-year olds, in which Stich in Time romped home three lengths in front of James Butler's Dawn Star.

The second Sanford victory was gained by Meteorite, a three-year-old son of Star Shoot, which started in a race for three-year olds that had not won $1,500, and with Butterscotch II., was carrying top weight of 121 pounds.

As there were a number of smart performers in the field the race was one of the most interesting of the day. John W. Schorr's Butterscotch was off in front with Arnold in close attendance. Meteorite was pinched off so that when rounding the turn he was forced into fifth place. In the stretch run Loftus shot Meteorite through to win by four lengths from Queen Errant, which took the place by three lengths from Hyannis. The time, 1:39 2-5, equalled the record performance of Midway.

There was a reverse for the Westerners in the third race in which John W. Schorr's Harry Kelly was favorite at 7 to 10. R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s Corn Tassel, the second choice, ridden by Johnny McTaggart in his old-time style, rushed by Harry Kelly rounding the turn and won by two lengths from Crank, while Harry Kelly landed back in fifth place.

Though the stewards took no definite aftion there was a queer situation in the steeplechase. Old Salt, a receding choice, was leading at the last turn of the field by two lengths. After taking the Liverpool the rest of the field closed, and J. Smith, who rode Old Salt, pulled him up and left the others to continue the chase. Ral Parr's Bally Bay came home winner by half a length from Reddest. Old Salt walked across the field without showing any symptoms of lameness, and the jockey's explanation that he thought Old Salt had broken down caused the stewards to begin an investigation of the race.

Takes Feature of Philadelphia's Grand Circuit Revival.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—Favorites captured two of the three races on the inaugural day program of the Grand Circuit meeting held on the Belmont Club's mile track at Narberth, Penn., today. This is the first of the big circuit meetings held in this vicinity in a quarter of a century, and a good-sized crowd turned out.

Busy's Lassie, winner of two $10,000 stake races this year was picked to win the Bellevue-Stratford Stake at $3,000, the feature event, but after taking the first heat in 2:09 finished second to Al Mack. In the second heat Al Mack closed upon the leaders after passing the half in 1:01, and beat Busy's Lassie in the final drive in 2:05½, the fastest heat of the day. The effort tired the mare badly and she was satisfied to finish seventh in the final heat, which Al Mack won handily from M. L. J. in 2:07½.

The nominations for the latter committee were: Fred W. Niles, John T. Boyle, James Clark, and John F. O'Hara, with one more member to be decided on later.

MITCHELL WINS HIS GAME FROM YANKS

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Aug. 20.—A puny Texas leaguer fell behind second base in the seventh inning of today's game between the Yankees and Tigers and broke up the dream of a shutout which Ray Fisher and his supporting cast were cherishing at the time. The hit pulled the Tigers to even terms with the New Yorkers after they had gone scoreless for six frames. The run which Willie Mitchell drove in in the ninth ended the game. The final figures were 3 to 2 in Detroit's favor.

The Yankees got the first run of the game in the second inning without the aid of a hit. Maisel was hit, and stole second base as Baker struck out. On Baumann's long hoist to Cobb, Maisel raced to third, and a short wild pitch was just enough to let him make the plate safely.

This one run kept the Yanks ahead up to the seventh, when they added one more. With one out Maisel was safe on Bush's fumble, but was forced at second, when Baker grounded to Burns. Baumann's scratch hit past Bush put Baker on second and a pass to Nunamaker filled the bases. Fisher's drive was too hot for Bush, and Baker counted. With the bases still filled to capacity, High flied to centre.

The Tigers tied things up in their half of the seventh. After Veach went out, Heilman singled to left and Burns scratched a single past Peck. Pipp and Fisher retired Young at first, both runners advancing on the out. Harper was sent up to hit for Yelle and his Texas leaguer to centre scored Burns and Heilman, tying the score. Mitchel followed with a scratch hit and Bush's third strike was a passed ball, filling the bases. Fisher got Vitt's drive and ended the inning.

Manager Donovan today sent Pitchers Monroe, Shocker, Love, and Russell and Catcher Alexander to New York. It was announced that Colonel Ruppert today purchased Catcher Ruel from the Memphis Club.

WAGNER'S LONE RUN DEFEATS BROOKLYN

Hans Wagner, the Pittsburgh veteran, demonstrated at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, yesterday that he is far from ready for the baseball scrap heap. Just as every one of the one thousand or so fans present were settling down to witness a long, drawn-out game he belted one of Rube Marquard's offerings to left field for a double and scampered across the plate a little later with the run that gave the clan of Hugo Bezdek its opening tilt with Uncle Wilbert Robinson's Superbas by 1 to 0. Pittsburgh's run tricked across the plate in the tenth inning as a result of an almost inconceivably wild heave by the youngster O'Rourke, which put an end to one of the best pitching duels seen on the Flatbush ball yard this season.

Frank Miller was on the mound against Marquard, and neither twirler was entitled to an edge the best of the honors until that fatal tenth frame. Several times both twirlers found themselves in hot water, but snappy fielding, of which there was an abundance, came in time to avert any danger. The allotment of hits for each team was three up to the final session, and they were widely scattered.

Wagner started that tenth frame with his screaming double to the left garden and he scurried around the base paths like the "Flying Dutchman" of old. On an attempted sacrifice by Jake Pitler, O'Rourke fielded the ball and made his weird toss in the general direction of Jake Daubert at first to get Pitler. The latter seemed to beat the throw anyway, but the ball, instead of nestling in Daubert's glove, kept merrily on its way to the grand stand wall, while the veteran Honus raced home from second base. Before the sphere was returned Pitler was camping safely on the keystone sack. He remained there, however, for Schmidt lined to Daubert, who quickly doubled Pitler at second. Then Cutshaw threw out Miller.

In their half the Robins tried to even the count with a couple of pinch hitters, but failed. Zach Wheat was sent in to bat for his brother, Mack, but his effort was an easy pop foul fly to Boeckel. Then Krueger went to the plate for Marquard and hoisted a long fly to Carey in centre field. Ivan Olson poled one to short centre which was taken care of by Pitler, and so ended Brooklyn's hopes.

Make New Cloth Prices.

Smith, Hogg & Co. of this city have put a price of 17½ cents on Red Seal zephyr ginghams and York seersuckers. York dress ginghams and Silver Brook seersuckers have been priced at 16½ cents. All are subject to advance without notice.

To Show Fall and Winter Styles.

From present indications about 200 Fall and Winter garments, made wholly or in part of pile fabrics, will be exhibited at the third annual fashion show of The Shelton Looms, which will be held at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel tomorrow, Thursday, and Friday. Most of the garments to be shown are entered in the prize competition that will be held in conjunction with the exhibition. The attendance will be limited to buyers of representative stores, and admission is by invitation only. A private showing of the garments in question will take place today at 3 P. M.

Burlap Demand Was Fair.

The local burlap trade opened the week with a fair demand, in which heavy goods figured most. Sales of 10-ounce, 40-inch burlaps were made at 13¾ cents, and they are now quoted at 13¾ @ 13⅞ cents. For 10½-ounce goods of the same width sellers are asking 14.15 @ 14¼ cents. Eight-ounce 40s are held at 10.30 cents, while for 7½-ounce 40s 10.10 to 10.15 is the figure. Nothing of importance has been heard from Calcutta of late, but Dundee is again reported higher. Prospects of further deliveries from the later place this year are said to be far from bright.

Must Wait for Their Refunds.

Importers of goose skins, who recently won their contention before the Board of General Appraisers for duty at 30 per cent., will have to wait for their refunds, as the Treasury Department has instructed Assistant Attorney General Hanson of the Department of Justice to carry the issue to the Customs Court of Appeals. The board, in finding in favor of the importers, held that goose skins dressed with the down on by similitude fell under the classification of furs dressed on the skin. The Treasury Department is unwilling to accept this ruling in view of the large annual importations, and will insist before the Customs Court that the original assessment of 40 per cent., as "feathers and downs, dressed," shall prevail as the proper classification.

What's What in Millinery.

Miss Top-o'-the-Mode need no longer stay awake at night wondering what she is to wear this Fall in the line of headgear, for the Retail Millinery Association of America brought out the "last word" in hats at its style show. Various kinds of large, medium, and small shapes will be worn, according to the association bulletin, most of which will feature high, soft crowns and soft brims. The Bishop's or Cardinal's crown will be much in evidence; so will saucer brim hats with shirred edges, draped turbans, &c. Beads and bone chains appear as trimmings in addition to the usual run. As for colors, black, purple, brown, taupe, sand, delft and Alice blues, bottle green, Burgundy, rose, and cerise, used alone or in combination, will be "it."

Fine Cottons Very Quiet.

There is very little activity in fine cotton goods here these days. Converters are unwilling to commit themselves any further until a better movement of the finished goods begins or until some reaction in cotton puts prices at a level where buyers will profit by no longer holding off. Partly because of the lack of demand for finished goods, and partly because certain speculative interests in the trade desire to let out some of their holdings, quite a few of the most used constructions can be had from second hands a quarter to a half cent below the figures the mills are asking for the same cloths. For instance, the mills want 15½ cents for 40-inch 96-100s, while second hands will sell for 15 cents. The latter quote 12¼ cents on 40-inch 88-80s, while the mills ask 12½ cents.

They Don't All Say So.

While agreeing that the "grafting" buyer of the old type—the kind that held out his hand every time he gave a good-sized order—has about disappeared, more than one salesman in this city does not agree with a recent report that buyers, as a whole, have even got past the "free lunch" stage in their relations with traveling men. "I find that my customers are just as willing to eat at my expense as they ever were," said one road man yesterday, "and other fellows in the house say the same thing. This talk about the buyers knowing they pay for their entertainment in the cost of the goods is a joke. There may be such cases, but in most instances it is the salesman who is the 'goat,' especially the commission man who has to pay his own expenses. Few of these men get 'sugar money' from their employers, and the buyers know it. Therefore they feel safe in taking all the treats they can get."

Linen Buyers Are Worried.

Not a few retail buyers of linens who are now here looking for these goods are worried over the difficulty they are having in getting them, in spite of all the warnings that have emanated from the primary markets. And where real linen damasks are still to be had there is said to be dissatisfaction regarding the prices that sellers are asking for them. Some buyers have come to this market in a very poorly posted condition as to what has been happening of late, with the result that there is more than one look of astonishment when they are told that many all-cotton damasks of good finish now cost more than all-linen ones did three or four years ago. While there is plenty of inquiry for union and all-cotton goods, the prices asked for them frequently make buyers reduce their orders substantially.

Sweater Sales Are Numerous.

While the high prices asked have slowed down the buying of sweaters in this market to some extent there is still a nice business going on from all accounts. Buyers of the better classes of goods are having less trouble in filling their needs than those who are seeking the cheaper ones, the reason being that while there is no dearth of expensive sweaters cheap ones are few and far between. Particularly hard to get are all cotton sweaters that can be retailed at prices which the persons who wear them can afford to pay. Not much easier to find, it is said, is a comparatively cheap sweater of mixed cotton and wool. In the silks, buyers are not much better off, for the rising cost of the raw materials—both pure and artificial—are very high in comparison with last year. Buying of these goods is reported active, however.

Gray Goods Sales Improve.

In spite of the break in cotton, there was a pretty fair movement of gray goods in the local market yesterday, in which both first and second hands shared. Contract sales of 39-inch 72-76s were made by the former at 12½ cents, while for similar shipment they sold 68-72s at 11¼ cents. August 38½-inch 64-60s were let out by second hands at 10¼ cents. In the coarse goods further large lots of 5.50 sheetings were sold by second hands at 8¼ cents for delivery during the remainder of this month and next. Mill prices for spot printcloths closed as follows:

WAR BRINGS DECLINE IN FOREIGN LUXURIES

PRICES 33 TO 50% HIGHER

Laces and Embroideries Cut in Half —Art Works Decline from $35,000,000 to $23,000,000.

A compilation by the National City Bank of New York, made public yesterday, showed that luxuries now being imported into the United States were materially below those of the corresponding dates preceding the war.

The value of the total of luxuries imported in the fiscal year 1917 was somewhat less than in the fiscal year 1914, but as prices have been greatly advanced it was held to be apparent that the quantity imported was much below that of the pre-war period. Measured by values alone the articles generally classed as luxuries fell below $300,000,000 in the fiscal year 1917, while in 1914 the values of the same articles imported aggregated $313,000,000. The bank estimated that in many cases the prices were now from 33 to 50 per cent. higher than in 1914.

According to the compilation, the articles which may be properly classed as luxuries are extremely numerous, including scores of important articles and hundreds of the minor classes, although there are a few important classes or groups which are readily recognized. Laces and embroideries, for example, imported in 1917 were only one-half in value those imported in 1914. In cotton laces alone the value imported in 1914 was $33,866,000, and in 1917, $16,297,000, while in laces of silk and fibres the 1917 value was also below that of 1914.

Art works also cited by the bank, which amounted to more than $35,000,000 in imports in 1914, dropped to $23,000,000 in 1917. Tobacco in its various forms totaled $40,000,000 in 1914 and only $30,000,000 in 1917. In many others with smaller totals the proportionate decrease was equally apparent.

Diamonds advanced in the war period approximately 30 per cent. in value per carat of corresponding quality; pearls, now in such popular favor, showed an even greater increase. Laces no longer obtainable from Germany and which France has now little opportunity to manufacture are much higher than in the period before the war, while leaf tobacco for wrappers for cigars advanced from $1.32 a pound in May, 1914, to $1.75 in May, 1917.

Currants imported in May, 1915, came at 15.5 cents a pound, whereas in May, 1914, the import price was 3.9 cents; figs 7.6 cents, against 3.4 cents, and still wine in casks 85.8 cents a gallon against 55.7 cents three years ago. Carpets and rugs woven whole, imported in May, 1917, averaged $6.39 a square yard against $3.21 in August, 1915, the first month in which they were separately stated by the Department of Commerce reports. Woolen dress goods imported in March, 1917, averaged $1.52 a pound, against 85 cents in May, 1914, and woolen cloths in April, 1917, $1.46 a pound against 90 cents in May, 1914. The bank's statement adds:

"The Department of Commerce figures of imports in 1917 show for the great group 'manufactures ready for consumption,' which is largely composed of luxuries, a total of $379,000,000 against $449,000,000 in 1914, a decline in stated value amounting to nearly 20 per cent., while the decrease in quantity must be far greater by reason of the fact that the value figures in 1917 represent merchandise imported at a much higher price per unit of quantity."

ESTIMATES OF COSTS OF STEEL AND COPPER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Preliminary estimates of steel and copper production costs were completed by the Federal Trade Commission today and will go to President Wilson tomorrow for use in fixing prices for the Government's war requirements. Figures asked by the President on the costs of producing other basic materials will be ready soon. Coal costs already have been determined.

The Government and industry have been farther apart perhaps on the price to be paid for steel than on any other commodity required for war needs. At present all Government purchases are made on tentative price bases, with the final price to be determined after the Government has gone over the Trade Commission's figures. The Navy Department is paying $65 a ton and the Shipping Board $50.

The Trade Commission's report, it is understood, goes more deeply into conditions in the steel industry than into actual cost figures. It recommends, it is understood, that the President designate some Government agency to pursue a constant investigation into steel costs during the war, and to determine the actual cost of production of each Government order.

This plan is suggested, it is understood, because of the great difference in production costs in various mills. The larger plants, particularly those that produce their own ore, are shown to turn out the finished product at a cost far below that of their competitors. In view of this, the commission is of the opinion that it will be impossible to fix a definite price for steel, and that prices must be fixed on specific orders. This, the Commission believes, will be comparatively easy, since Government orders will be big.

Steel is selling now in the open market at more than $100 a ton, and in some instances recently orders have been placed at nearly $200. Even the producers agree that this price is too high, but they point to the abnormal demand.

The Trade Commission's recommendations, in the opinion of some officials, will make it extremely difficult for the Government to carry out its announced policy of seeing that the public as well as the Government gets its requirements at reasonable prices.

No figures on copper production costs have been announced, but the Trade Commission's reports indicates that large profits are made at the present market prices. Many Government officials hold that metals such as copper, zinc, lead, and others should not be sold even to the Government at too low a price. Unless good prices are paid, they say, there will be no incentive to increase production as capital will not seek to develop new sources unless profits are satisfactory.

GROENER LEAVES WAR BOARD

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 20.—Commenting on the retirement from the Prussian War Department of General Groener, who, it is reported, will take a command at the front, the Leipziger Volkszeitung, an organ of the minority Socialists, says:

"According to rumors, General Groener's fall was compassed by a powerful group in the army of the interests of big industrialists, for whom the auxiliary service law is too liberal. Dr. Michaelis has succeeded Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg as Imperial Chancellor, but the distribution of power in the Empire remains the same. It is not the will of the people or the vote in Parliament that decided the possession of power. Now, as before, the decision depends on the struggle between the interested groups behind the scenes.

"Such a struggle seems to have decided General Groener's fate. He has gone one day after the denial that he would retire. Such a system is the opposite of democracy."

FOR SHORT-TERM BONDS.

Proposal Will Be Taken Up by House Ways and Means Committee.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The advisability of issuing for domestic needs along with long-term war bonds, a series of short-term bonds, payable in from three to five years, to prevent payment of high interest charges through a cheap money period which experts believe may follow the war, will be discussed by the House Ways and Means Committee when it meets late this week. Such a plan is being agitated in England, where interest rates have mounted rapidly.

The new issue of bonds for allied loans will carry 4 per cent. interest, in all probability, an advance of one half of 1 per cent. over the first allied loan bonds, and a 5 per cent. rate on all bonds if the war continues long is predicted by many. As the bonds are convertible, each new issue at advanced rates increases the rate for previous issues.

No attempt will be made to apply the short-term plan to allied loan bonds unless the Allies request it. England's request on the first Liberty Loan was that it be made twenty-five years if possible. It was fixed at fifteen.

SHORT-TERM STATE NOTES.

Announcement of Issue Will Be Made in a Few Days.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Aug. 20.—It became known here today that the State was soon to put out an issue of short-term notes. Details are to be made public within a few days.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Dealings Contract Still Further and Prices Work Lower in Absence of Support.

Declines running from small fractions up to five points were the rule in a very narrow and dull stock market yesterday. Less interest was manifested in prices than was shown even on the dullest days of last week. The dullness has become so pronounced, in fact, that brokers are beginning to discuss the possibility that speculation may almost entirely disappear, leaving only the limited amount of investment buying to supply orders. The lack of interest in securities just now is intensified by the absence from the city of a great many traders and bankers. It is due very largely to uncertainty over the final working out of the price-fixing policy and to the preparations being made for the next Government loan.

Most of whatever interest was awakened by yesterday's price movements centred in the behavior of the anthracite rails. Reading fell from its best price of 92 to 89½, and closed at a half point above that figure with a net decline of 2½. Delaware & Hudson again sold at a new low, touching 102⅛, but closed a point and a half higher with a net loss for the day of only ¼. The Street naturally associated these declines with the steps being taken at Washington to control the supply of coal and to regulate its price. Not only was this taken to mean that the carriers with coal mining interests will have to accept a loss of income from their outside properties, but it was pointed out that with the removal of the possibility of extra dividends from the coal holdings, much of the speculative attractiveness of the shares will be lost. Most of the other rail issues sagged to slightly lower levels on very small dealings. Speculative traders see little reason to buy these issues, and every offer of any size carries prices to lower levels before attracting a bid.

It is seldom that there has been such a preponderance of bearish views upon the stock market as has prevailed in recent days. A few stocks advanced yesterday, notably Crucible Steel, which moved up 2⅛ points, but only because of investment buying. The outside public is evidently committed to the belief that it is better to wait until the latest peace proposal has been disposed of, if not until the Government authorities announce the terms upon which they will buy steel and copper. Calls could be purchased yesterday on most issues much closer to the market than has been the case before this year. Wall Street itself is not discouraged so much at the possible limitation of profits by the Government as by the probable limitation of activity because of the uncertainties connected with price-fixing and other revolutionary measures of control now being undertaken by the Government.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Home Rails Uncertain Owing to the Threatened Strike.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The stock market was generally firm today. Home rails were uncertain owing to the engine men's demands, but the general opinion was that the Government's attitude regarding the trouble will be strong, but reasonable. Shipping shares were firm, with Royal Mail and Argentine Navigations leading features on reports of a joint working arrangement between the companies.

Oils continued to harden, and in the industrial section cement stocks were the feature. Mexican and Peruvian issues were prominent among the foreigners.

Money was plentiful, and in discounts most of the business was in short dated bills.

SCHWAB MEETS BANKERS.

Plans for Additional Bethlehem Financing Discussed.

Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation came to town yesterday to confer with bankers regarding plans for additional financing of the corporation. Last week several conferences were held here, but Mr. Schwab did not attend them. While the final details of the program were not completed, it was said that in all probability an announcement would be made in a few days.

It is believed in banking quarters that the new financing will probably take the form of a $100,000,000 issue of 8 per cent. preferred stock, half of which will be kept in the corporation's treasury. The Bethlehem recently put out a large issue of stock, but the receipts of large orders from the Government and provisions made for the payment of heavy excess profits tax make additional financing necessary.

GAIN FOR HIDE & LEATHER.

Company's Manufacturing Profit for Year $3,418,730.

The annual report of the American Hide and Leather Company for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1917, shows earnings amounting to $13.56 on its $13,000,000 of preferred oustanding, as compared with $12.60 in the previous year. The company has reserved $434,856 more than its tax account of the previous year to meet possible excess profit taxes. Had this not been done, the earnings would nave amounted to $16.90 a share.

The company's manufacturing profit for the year was $3,418,730 against $2,784,772 for 1916, and its net income $2,457,807, an increase of $147,261 on the year. Payments of bond interest and sinking fund reserve left a surplus of $1,762,750, on the year. Two dividends, 5 per cent. on Sept. 1, 1916, and 2½ per cent. on Feb. 15, 1917, were paid on the preferred stock, aggregating $975,000.

That the shipping question from the viewpoint of operation as well as of construction is beginning to excite considerable interest in Great Britain as well as among shipping men here is evident from an article in the latest number of Fairplay, the British shipping weekly, to reach this side. The idea is beginning to dawn on shipping men all over the world that fighting the submarine means generalship in extracting, by economical management, the last ounce of carrying efficiency from such tonnage as you have, as well as adding to the available tonnage by rapid new construction. The last few weeks have seen a remarkable growth among men in the United States in touch with the ocean carrying trade of sentiment for a prompt announcement by the Shipping Board of a comprehensive policy in the operation of its new ships, as well as those commandeered, in order that the tonnage, when ready, may have its full value in the struggle and in order that private business enterprise in this field may go ahead with the assurance that it knows where it stands.

The British View.

Fairplay has the following, among other pertinent remarks on the subject: "Chartering seems to be at a standstill, it having been impossible to obtain neutral tonnage during the last week. The action of the Government as regards British shipowners is having a very serious effect, and may cause a large number of experienced shipowners to give up shipowning in disgust. The Shipping Controller, who is obsessed with the idea that his so-called standard boats are perfection improved upon for present needs, has ordered that all private work not beyond a certain stage is to be set on one side, notwithstanding that this work could have been finished long before the standard boats will be ready. In other cases boats * * * which were promised free voyages have been requisitioned at once on completion and forced to accept the absurd blue-book rates. Of British and allied tonnage there is now practically none that has any semblance of freedom. The amount of chartering, therefore, * * * will apparently dwindle daily."

Labor Day and a Play Day.

The absence of new business on the Stock Exchange yesterday gave an impetus to the movement to close the Exchange on Sept. 1, the Saturday preceding Labor Day. It is expected that a petition will be circulated on the floor this week, and that if conditions continue to warrant it, the Governors will approve the closing. The Cotton Exchange authorities have already approved the suggestion that their board be closed on Saturday. The fact that brokerage organizations have been depleted by the draft and vacations makes a holiday on the first of the month, when accounts must be made up, particularly desirable.

Another Advance in Silver.

There was a further advance in quotations for bar silver yesterday, and a new high record was made for the present movement. Prices moved up to 87¾ cents an ounce here and to 44½ pence in London. This is a gain of 1 cent from the previous high figure. Current prices are the highest since 1891. The upward movement in quotations for the metal stimulated activity in silver mining stocks. Trading in Ontario Silver Mining was unusually heavy in volume, about 7,000 shares changing hands in the last hour, the net gain for the day being ⅝.

Working for Nothing.

A number of bond distributing houses in New York and out-of-town have written to Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury suggesting that some arrangements be made for compensating them for services rendered in connection with the sale of the next issue of Liberty Loan bonds. The bill authorizing the bond issue provides for expenses to the extent of only one-tenth of one per cent. of the total amount of the bonds. The major portion of this has been or will be expended for engraving the interim certificates and the definitive bonds, the balance being allowed for the printing of posters, incidental expenses and additional clerk hire. For the work done on the first Liberty Loan, the banks, trust companies and investment houses received no compensation whatever, the Government agreeing to pay only traveling expenses and the expenses for hiring halls, &c. Officers of the large banks practically devoted their entire time and attention to the Liberty Loan during the campaign and their clerks and bond salesmen were assigned to the work. For all this they did not receive a cent. The actual cost of the campaign to the banks and bonds houses was very large, in some cases the total aggregating in excess of $100,000. In England and in Canada, banks and dealers receive a small commission for selling Government bonds, and it is suggested that some similar provision be made here.

Complain of Unfair Treatment.

It is pointed out by bankers that there is no reason why banking organizations should not be paid for their services in the same way that munition manufacturers are paid. They say that the Government does not ask and does not expect any contractor to render services gratis, and similarly should not compel banks and bond dealers to labor without compensation. In New York there have been fewer complaints than in the smaller cities, for the reason that the rich houses here managed to stand the loss without serious injury, while smaller concerns have found the burden a hardship. In banking circles the opinion is expressed that the United States Government should not place itself in the position of asking favors or charity from any one, and should be willing to pay for all services rendered.

Martin Out of Wright-Martin?

An apparently authentic report, circulated in the financial district yesterday, that Glenn L. Martin has withdrawn from the Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation, and is negotiating for financial backing sufficient to enable him to build and operate a new $250,000 airplane factory at Cleveland, formed the principal excuse for a bear raid on Wright-Martin stock on the curb, which carried it down to 9⅛, closing at 9¾. The stock has been selling lately around 12, but its fluctuations appear to have been of a purely speculative character. Curtiss airplane stock was sympathetically affected, going off to 46 and a fraction, but recovering to 47½. An official of the Wright-Martin company said that Mr. Martin had a contract with the company, but that he did not believe any serious obstacles would be put in his way if he really wished to withdraw. It has been rumored for some time that Mr. Martin was anxious to get out and find a freer hand elsewhere. With his withdrawal, the Wright-Martin Company would have neither Wright nor Martin connected with its management.

Discusses Gasoline Shortage.

The Oil, Paint, and Drug Reporter, commenting on the recent great advances in crude oil prices, attributes them to several factors, "the decline in the output of oil fields of high-grade gasoline content oil, the scarcity and high price of labor, and the burden upon the producer of the higher cost of every item entering into the drilling and completion of wells." Of these, however, it considers the first, together with the tremendously increased demand for gasoline, the most important. California production, the publication declares, "is dwindling so rapidly that it is but a question of time before all available stocks in storage shall have disappeared." The burden of production of gasoline is consequently thrown upon the mid-continental fields. The increase, moreover, the Reporter considers, will not, in toto, compensate the producers for the heavy increase in their expenses. The only solution the Reporter can suggest for the increasing scarcity of gasoline is that certain private manufacturers who control processes for extracting motor fuel from the crude oil, far more efficient, it says, and productive of a much higher percentage of fuel to bulk of crude than those generally available, give the use of their processes to the Government for the period of the war.

COTTON SELLS OFF

There was a break of $3.25 and $3.90 per bale in the cotton market yesterday under active general selling on reports of better weather in the Southwest and talk of an easier spot basis. October contracts sold off to 23.85, making a decline of 78 points from Saturday's final figures, and closed at 23.87, with the general list closing barely steady at a net decline of 63 to 76 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 21 to 25 points on private reports of rains in the Southwest. After showing a net loss of some 30 to 40 points, there were rallies of 10 to 12 points on covering, and the official Western belt forecast for showers in the northern part of Texas but for nothing better than cloudy conditions in the southern sections. This bulge met increased offerings, however, and the selling became more active after the publication of the detailed weather report for the Houston district. This showed no rain of consequence in South Texas, but indicated good rains in Northern, Western, and in some central sections also. While this did not indicate that the drought had been fully broken, it suggested that the drought area had been reduced, and evidently increased confidence in a bearish weekly report from the Weather Bureau tomorrow. Selling was also stimulated by reports of an easing spot basis, and the market was very weak during the afternoon, with active months selling 63 to 78 points net lower. The close was at practically the lowest point of the day, showing losses of approximately 150 points from the high levels reached on the bulge of last week.

Reports that the advisability of placing cotton on the list of commodities subject to export license restrictions were still being considered, attracted some attention during the morning. The main features discussed on the decline, however, were the gradually increasing new crop movement, and the more optimistic view of the yield. Selling had probably been held in check last week by the drought complaints from the Southwest and an apprehension that they might develop into an August crop scare. The rains reported seemed to relieve such fears, and the talk of an easing spot basis fitted into bearish theories regarding the probable effect of new crop competition. There was scattered covering at times during the day but only slight rallies occurred and bearish sentiment was still very much in evidence at the close, although it was pointed out that the technical position had probably strengthened.

No exports were reported for the day. Exports so far this season have been 158,405 bales against 269,578 last year.

WHEAT.

There was only one transaction reported in the wheat market at Chicago, that being at $2.05 for September, an advance of 3 cents over the close of Saturday. It represented the settlement of an outstanding account and did not reflect any change in general conditions. Pending the Government's price on wheat even the cash market was more or less unsettled and apart from moderate export and milling inquiry there was little feature to the latter market. The visible supply showed a decrease of 825,000 bushels in domestic stocks and a decrease of 3,787,000 bushels in Canada for the week. Cash wheat here was easy, No. 2 red being quoted at $2.25 and No. 2 hard $2.27, cost, insurance, and freight, New York export.

CORN.

Although weak early in the session and at one time about 3c down from Saturday's close, the corn market showed subsequent strength, which carried the list back to $1.08⅞c for December, or ⅜c over Saturday, the close being ⅜c to ⅝c net higher. The visible supply increased 434,000 bushels. The local cash market was steady, with No. 2 yellow quoted at $1.95 and No. 2 mixed $1.93 cost, insurance, and freight New York.

OATS.

Cash markets were lower again, but some reports said that the low prices being obtained by farmers had already resulted in a marked falling off of shipments from the country, and that country elevators would hold the oats they have on hand. This caused a rally in oats after early weakness, and the market closed ⅝c to 1c net higher. The visible decreased 153,000 bushels. Cash oats were easy here, standard being quoted at 71c; No. 2 white, 71½c; No. 3 white, 70c; No. 4 white, 69c; fancy clipped white, 72@75c; ordinary clipped white, 70@72c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was higher on the strength in hogs and abroad, together with light receipts and the late firmness in corn. There was a considerable selling at the advance, however, although the market absorbed the product readily and was quite firm at the close. Receipts at Chicago were 18,000 hogs, with 11,000 expected on Tuesday. Kansas City had 6,500 hogs and Omaha 3,000 hogs.

SUGAR.

No changes occurred in refined sugar prices, which were listed at from 8.40@9.15c for fine granulated. There was a moderate inquiry reported, but business was still being restricted by refiners who are considerably behind in delivery. Raw sugar was quiet and unsettled, with buyers of August and early September shipment Cubas at 6⅛c, cost and freight basis. Holders generally asked 6½c, cost and freight, but one small lot was said to have been available at 6 7-16c, cost and freight. There were some full duty sugars under offer at 6¼c, cost, insurance, and freight, with indications that 1-16c less might be considered. Spot quotations follow: Centrifugal, 7.40c; molasses, 6.52c, cost and freight, 6⅜c.

COFFEE.

The coffee market was more active yesterday. This was largely a reflection of further evening-up, chiefly in the way of switching from September to later deliveries. Aside from such operations, however, there seemed to be some little increase of interest, and the market steadied after an opening decline with the close showing a net advance of 1 to 3 points. Sales including exchange were 127,000 bags. The local spot market remained quiet on the basis of 9¼ for Rio 7s and 10⅛ for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

WASHINGTON FAVORS A LOAN TO MEXICO

WILL SEEK $250,000,000

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—After more than two years of pleading for financial assistance, the Mexican Government has been assured that American money can be obtained. It was learned today that the American Government had finally conveyed the intimation to American bankers that its faith in the Carranza Government had grown to the extent that it felt justified in extending moral indorsement of a loan.

Officials of the Mexican Government have denied that any indirect effort has been made to obtain a loan in the United States, but American bankers have been approached repeatedly with the suggestion that they finance the new government in that country and a more direct effort was made many months ago in London. The London bankers refused to have anything to do with the project and the intimation came from the foreign office that it could not be countenanced.

The American bankers were never averse to placing money in Mexico, if assurance of some sort could be had from the State Department that their investment would be safeguarded. The exact character of the assurance now given them has not been revealed, but it is understood that in the event the Mexican loan is floated in this country, Presidend Carranza will agree to receive advice as to its expenditure and to a degree of supervision.

Mexico will try to obtain at least $250,000,000. The Mexican congress authorized the floating of a $150,000,000 loan and in addition to that $100,000,000 will be asked for the rehabilitation of the railways.

Reports to the State Department from Ambassador Fletcher and consuls continue to indicatfe a steady, b ut slow, increase in the strength of the Carranza Government. Wtih the exception of a few stretches of railway the lines of communication are open and rebel activities have been materially reduced in the last six months.

The most serious problems of the country now appear to be economic. A part of the failure to revive business is attributed here to government decrees that restrict the investment of capital although the larger influence is said to be due to the disturbed political conditions.

ROADS CARRY MORE COAL.

Bituminous Increase in July 20.4 Per Cent. Over a Year Ago.

Fairfax Harrison, Chairman of the Railroads War Board, anonunced in a statement issued yesterday that owing to improved methods of handling and loading, the railroads of the United States carried, in July, 1917, 129,721 more carloads of bituminous coal than in July, 1916. This is equivalent to an increase of 20.4 per cent. in the carying capacity of the roads, and makes availible for consumption 6,486,000 tons more coal than would have been available had last year's figures been merely maintained.

The increase in average daily loading amounted to 540 more cars a day in July than in June. For the months of April, May, June, and July the roads transported 578,536 more carloads, or 28,886,000 more tons, of bituminous coal than in the corresponding period of 1916, or an increase of 25.1 per cent.

Reorganization Plan for Emerson.

It is reported that the reorganization plan of the Emerson Motors Company is based upon the issue of $1,000,000 of 6 per cent. cumulative first preferred stock, $113,700 noncumulative second preferred, and $2,377,789 of common, all at a par value of $10. The company now has $2,377,388 of common and $341,095 of preferred stock outstanding, and unsecured indebtedness of $42,154, with physical assets of about $640,197.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Reading's decline was one of the features of the day on the Consolidated Exchange. Expectation of an early announcement of Government control of the coal situation appeared to be the chief adverse influence bearing upon it. The market, generally, was of a dragging sort during the greater part of the session. Quotations worked moderately lower, although there were some prominent exceptions.

REYNOLDS DEFENDS SALE OF DREAMLAND

PUZZLED BY ASSESSMENT

Says Entry on Tax Books of $550,000 Was Nearly a Million Below Capitalization.

Ex-Senator William H. Reynolds was examined in the District Attorney's office yesterday as to his connections with the sale of the Dreamland and Rockaway Park properties to the city. For more than two hours he was closeted with Assistant District Attorneys William Harmon Black and Edwin P. Kilroe, who are conducting a special investigation into allegations made by William Bullock, the Director of the Bureau of the City Inquiry, an organization devoted to assailing the Mitchel administration in the interest of Tammany Hall.

Before answering any questions, Mr. Reynolds requested Assistant District Attorney Black to postpone the investigation until after election, because he thought the inquiry was permeated with political motives. Mr. Black replied that the request could not be considered, and that the Bullock charges, having come to the District Attorney's office in the normal course of procedure, had to be investigated promptly.

Ex-Senator Reynolds insisted at the hearing that there was not the slightest evidence to prove that there had been any criminal irregularities in the transactions. Mr. Bullock said that he believed that the city had been defrauded out of large sums of money by the manner in which the Dreamland and Rockaway Park deals were conducted.

Mr. Reynolds answered more than 300 questions in the course of the session. His attention was called to an entry in the tax books of April, 1911, which showed that Dreamland was assessed at $550,000. The former Senator said he could not understand what he called a piece of miscalculation. He had decided that there was something wrong with the tax record, because six weeks later he had reported to the Condemnation Committee of the Board of Estimate that the property was capitalized at $1,500,000.

Another matter upon which Mr. Reynolds was questioned was with reference to a notation which appeared in his own records of $15,000 received by him from the City of New York for services rendered. He was unable to tell what the sum was for, as the notation was made some years ago. At this date, he said, it would be difficult for him to explain just why he was paid this sum, although it could be taken for granted that it was for service rendered.

Assistant District Attorney Black declined to discuss Mr. Reynolds's testimony, and Mr. Reynolds, after emerging from the hearing, also declined to talk about it. In a few days, he said, he thought he might be in a position to make a statement.

Another witness at the same hearing yesterday was Joseph Huber, head of the Huber Brewing Company, who stated that he was the head stockholder and bondholder in the Dreamland Corporation at the time the city purchased the property for $1,850,000. He told Assistant District Attorney Kilroe that before the city purchased the property ex-Senator Reynolds had called on him and said that an excellent opportunity had presented itself for a real estate transaction.

Acting more or less upon Mr. Reynolds's suggestion, Mr. Huber said that he had invested $175,000, and for this sum obtained a sufficient amount of bonds to foreclose on the Dreamland Corporation if it failed to pay interest on the bonds. According to Mr. Huber, when the property was sold for the nonpayment of the interest, he bid in the property at a Sheriff's sale. He now holds the foreclosure deed to it.

The hearing will continue today, with Frank Bailey, Vice President of the Title Guarantee & Trust Company, appearing as the principal witness.

SHIPPING PLANS COMPLETED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation have practically completed plans for letting contracts for the construction of Government-owned yards in which a great fleet of fabricated steel ships will be built, and definite action will be taken this week.

Estimates have been made of all expenditures in this direction, as well as for commandeering of ships on the stocks and constructing in private yards beyond that for which contracts have already been signed. To complete this program Congress will be asked for an additional appropriation, which may exceed considerably the sum of $500,000,000 mentioned last week.

The whole program has now assumed a definite shape, which the Shipping Board believes will bring speedy results. Bainbridge Colby, who has been conferring with shipping interests on the subject of taking over American tonnage on the seas, returned to Washington today with a report for Chairman Hurley, which, it was said, was very favorable to quick action. It is probable that rates will soon be decided upon in co-operation with allied interests.

In the operation of the ships taken over, an organization headed by a traffic expert will be in command. It is said that a prominent railroad man had been decided upon for this position, as he was familiar not only with railroad and crop conditions, but with the shipping situation. He will have as coworkers experts of transatlantic, Pacific and South American shipping facilities and trade. The organization will be under the direct supervision of the Shipping Board.

JUMP IN PRICES OF AUTOS.

Fourteen Large Companies Have Already Announced Increase.

A general increase in the price of automobiles is indicated by announcements now being made by some of the motor car companies. Within the last two weeks fourteen companies of standing have revised their prices upward. Some changes take effect at once, others not for two weeks or a month. The advances range from $25 to $50 in the low-priced cars to $200 and $250 in the high-priced ones. The reasons given for these readjustments are advance in the price of materials and in wages.

The low point in auto prices was at the beginning of 1916. In March of last year an upward trend started, but the increases were not large compared with the price of the car, and leaders in the industry assert that even with advances recently made the increases in the cost of materials and labor is reflected less in the price changes in automobiles than any other leading article of manufacture. The car which has the largest sale of any in this country has not yet raised its price, but it is reported that for the first time since it was put on the market a price change upward instead of downward will be announced this Fall.

MORE SHIPWORKERS STRIKE

Report That Brooklyn Navy Yard Men Would Quit Is Denied.

George Wallace, Secretary of the Marine Trades Council, said yesterday that the situation in the shipyards strike was practically unchanged. Another fifteen hundred men were expected to go out from yards around New York, but it was decided finally that they should wait until after the strikers' mass meeting, which is called for 1 o'clock today at Tammany Hall. Other speakers besides Mr. Wallace will be Louis Weyland, Vice President of the International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers, and E. J. Deering, business agent of the International Machinists' Association.

About 100 men left their jobs yesterday in shipyards at Staten Island and Brooklyn, which, according to the unions concerned, brought the number of strikers to 8,000, but, according to a conservative estimate made from facts collected from the employers and the men, the number does not exceed 4,500. Mr. Weyland said he wished to deny any rumors that men were going to quit work in the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

The employes of the Government working on ships in the navy yard were quite content to wait for the Naval Wage Board to meet next Friday and discuss pay and working hours, as they were confident of getting a fair deal.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

In the far westerly section of Forty-second Street, near the river frontage, the largest deal was closed yesterday that has been made in that vicinity for some time. The row of six old houses at 536 to 546 West Forty-second Street, between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues, was purchased as an investment by Sol Bloom from heirs of the Brown estate of Rhode Island, the individual sellers being Sybel K. Sellar of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and Georgette W. Brown of Newport, the first three houses being sold by the former and those at 542 to 546 by the latter. The six plots cover a frontage of 116 feet by 98.9 opposite the Park & Tilford warehouse erected a few years ago.

Mr. Bloom has no plans for improvement, having acquired the property because it was on the market at a reasonable price. M. Cohn & Co. were the brokers in the transaction.

West Side Protective Purchase.

As a protection for the new thirteen-story apartment house nearing completion at the northeast corner of West End Avenue and Ninety-third Street, the builders, Anthony Campagna and Vito Cerabone, as the 690 West End Avenue Corporation, have purchased the dwelling at 683 West End Avenue, 16 by 85, from Clara Kern.

The house is twenty feet north of the northwest corner of Ninety-third Street and prevents the assemblage of a plot there for a future tall building directly opposite the house on the northeast corner. A month ago the builders acquired the two houses at 270 and 272 West Ninety-third Street, adjoining the southeast corner of the avenue. George Ranger was the broker.

Private Dwelling Buyers.

James H. Cruikshank has purchased from Lucy C. Whitridge and Bertha W. Smith the three-story dwelling extension at 136 West Ninety-seventh Street on plot 17.6 by 100. Charles E. Moore was the broker.

James A. Dowd has sold the four-story dwelling at 160 West 122d Street on plot 19 by 100.11, near Seventh Avenue, to Florence E. Swanson.

Harlem Apartment Deal.

The five-story apartment house at 452 St. Nicholas Avenue, 37.5 by 75.5 feet, opposite St. Nicholas Park, just south of 133d Street, has been purchased by D. J. Riod from Mrs. Helene G. Benjamin. Leon S. Altmayer was the broker.

Bronx Sales.

The two-story frame house at 2,311 Hughes Avenue, 25 by 100 feet, near 183d Street, has been purchased by Vito D'Oragio from Michele Furia.

The building on the north side of 187th Street, 100 feet west of Southern Boulevard, a flat, 32.9 by 100 feet, has been sold by the 187th Street Construction Company to Elvira Zanchelli.

Brooklyn.

M. Bennett & Sons have sold the store and apartment building at 633 Vanderbilt Avenue for Miss Anna Morgan of Windsor, Conn., to Rosairo Castellano.

The two four-story flats at 368 and 370 Tompkins Avenue, northwest corner of Putnam Avenue, have been sold by D. S. Gerstenfeld for Thomas A. McGrath to William H. Coates. The flat is 40 by 90 feet.

Walter S. Ross and C. C. Gretsinger have sold for Walter Dowling the one-family house at 559 Sixty-eighth Street.

James B. Fisher has sold for Teresa Collet the residence at 1,061 East Nineteenth Street, 40 by 100 feet, near Avenue J, to Blanche B. Phillips and for Maria Werry the three-story dwelling at 196 Hooper Street, 20 by 100 feet, to Fannie Greenfield.

Business Purchase in L. I. City.

William D. Bloodgood & Co. has sold a plot fronting on Wilbur Avenue, twenty-five feet east of William Street, Long Island City, for Pauline Roth and the plot adjoining for Anna G. Deufel. The property, in conjunction with that sold a few days ago on William Street for Judge L. N. Manley by the same broker, was purchased by a New York manufacturer, who will improve the site with a six-story business building.

Buys $30,000 Rumson Estate.

The Rumson, N. J., estate, formerly owned by Chester Simmons, has been purchased by Harry I. Caeser. The property contains about seven acres, with a large residence, garage, and stable, fronting 400 feet on both Buena Vista and Conover Avenues. It has been held at $30,000. William H. Hintelmann was the broker in the sale.

Buys Montclair Home.

The residence at 126 Cooper Avenue, Upper Montclair, on plot 70 by 200, has been purchased by Mason Trowbridge from John C. O'Neill. It was held at $12,500. The Frank Hughes-Taylor Company was the broker.

$7,600 for Connecticut Estate.

L. Walter Lissberger, President of the Keystone Tire Company, purchased the Connor estate known as Browleside Homestead, near South Norwalk, Conn., sold at auction on Saturday by Arthur C. Sheridan. He paid $7,600. The property contains eleven acres, with a large house, fronting 600 feet on the Boston Post Road and 1,200 feet on Richards Avenue.

Greenwich Players Lease Houses.

Pepe & Bro. have leased for Michael Hallahan 3 and 4 Sheridan Square, two four-story houses, to the Greenwich Village Players, for eight years, at $3,000 per year. The houses are being reconstructed into studio apartments and will be ready for occupancy Oct. 1. They are near the new Greenwich Village Theatre.

Commercial Leases.

Cross & Brown Company has leased the store at 1,140 Broadway to M. S. Mark & Co. in conjunction with Stephen H. Tyng for a term of years.

Van Vlick & Place have leased two of the new stores at 687-689 Hudson Street for ten years for Cannon Bros. Company.

J. Arthur Fischer has leased to J. Henry Sticht the store, basement, and first loft at 344 Seventh Avenue.

Jacob Finkelstein & Son have leased for the United Cigar Store Company the store at 390 East Fordham Road, corner of Webster Avenue, to Peter Takis.

Private House Rentals.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co., in conjunction with Albert B. Ashforth, have leased 4 East Seventy-seventh Street, a five-story dwelling adjoining the corner of Fifth Avenue, for Mrs. Benjamin Knower, to Albrecht Pagenstecher, Jr.

J. Arthur Fischer has leased to Maurice Sternberg the three-story dwelling at 164 West Fiftieth Street.

Realty Notes.

Negotiations are said to be nearly closed for the sale or lease by the National Vaudeville Artists, Inc., McHenry Chesterfield, Secretary, of the former home of the White Rats Club at 227 to 231 West Forty-sixth Street. The building is a six-story structure, on a plot 76 by 100.5, between Broadway and Eighth Avenue.

BIG STEAMSHIPS DAMAGED

After an investigation of the fire which destroyed Pier 26, Brooklyn, and damaged the British steamer Baron Jedburgh and the Norwegian steamer Christian Bors yesterday, Fire Marshal Thomas Brophy reported last evening that the blaze had its origin in burlap bags and that spontaneous combustion was the cause.

Several explosions after the fire started gave many persons the idea that incendiary bombs might have been placed on the vessels or on the pier. The Fire Marshal asserts that these explosions were due to the discharge of signal rockets on board the Baron Jedburgh. The total demage caused by the fire is estimated at about $500,000.

The destroyed pier was 748 feet long and 85 feet wide. It was of the old-fashioned type with a wooden shed. It is owned by the New York Dock Company and was piled with grain, sugar, hides, beans, and other merchandise. This consisted of the cargo unloaded from the Christian Bors, which lay to the south of the pier, and that awaiting to be placed in the hold of the Baron Jedburgh on the north side of the pier. Both vessels are under charter of the Furniss Withy Company of 32 Broadway, Manhattan, and have been plying between this port and South America. Around the two vessels were numerous tugs and lighters containing coal and cargo.

When the firemen arrived four alarms were turned in. All the fireboats from the river front and twenty tugboats of the auxiliary service aided in fighting the blaze. On the afterdeck of the Baron Jedburgh was a four-inch gun, with 150 rounds of ammunition. O'Toole and Captain Bailey threw the shells overboard.

In less than half an hour the pier was a roaring mass of flames. Many of the smaller boats were towed out into the stream. Before the Baron Jedburgh could be moved her superstructure caught fire and the hawsers holding her to the pier were burned through. She was then towed into the river, wheer the fireboats poured water into her until the blaze was extinguished.

The Christian Bors, on account of the wind, which blew the flames in an opposite direction, was in a position of comparative safety. A portion of her superstructure was burned and some of her hull plates were sprung by the heat. Both vessels will have to be placed in dry dock. Among the smaller boats partially burned were the tug Bauker of the Bauker Towing Company, the Robert J. Moran of the Moran Towing Company, the tug Mastodon of the Boston Supply Company, the lighters Lake Port of the Ward Line, Elizabeth of the Bermuda Coal Company, "20" and "30" of the New York Dock Company, the Hecla of the New York Central Railroad, and the scow Ed and Tom, owned by Cleary Brothers.

While the men were fighting the big fire an alarm came from Montague Street for a small blaze on board the steamship Esperanza of the Ward Line. This was put out with a loss of about $2,000.

EIGHT IN AUTOMOBILE DEAD AFTER COLLISION

NEW LONDON, Conn., Tuesday, Aug. 21.—Eight persons are dead as the result of an automobile being struck by a New Haven train at the ferry crossing at Saybrook late last night.

There were nine passengers in the car when it was struck by the locomotive, on the pilot of which the bodies of a man and a baby were found. The dead and injured were brought here in two machines.

Early this morning the local office of the railroad company said that eight of the nine were dead, four being killed outright, one dying on the way to the hospital, and three after they arrived at the hospital. Because of the condition of the bodies identification at this hour is not possible.

The surviving member of the party, a young girl, is so shocked that she is not able to tell who was in the automobile or give any statement regarding the accident.

A license card bearing the name of Reginald M. Rowland of New London was found on one victim.

ELEVEN PERSONS HURT ON COLONIAL EXPRESS

Eleven passengers on the Colonial Express, operated by the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Pennsylvania railroads, were injured yesterday when an electric locomotive ran into the train with great force after the steam locomotive had been detached in the Sunnyside yards, near Long Island City, so that the coaches could be brought into the Pennsylvania Station through the East River tunnels. It was the first accident on the New York Connecting Railroad since the "humpback" bridge across Hell Gate was put into operation in April so that trains runnings between Washington and Boston might be brought into the Pennsylvania Station on Manhattan Island, and an investigation was ordered at once.

After the train of ten coaches had crossed the bridge at 3 o'clock it was left standing in the Sunnyside yards so that an electric locomotive might pick it up and pull it through the tubes to the station. After a wait of a few minues the electric locomotive approached at high speed. Apparently misunderstanding the signals given him or misjudging the speed of his motor, J. J. Graham, the motorman, failed to slow up enough to avoid a crash with the train. The electric locomotive struck with such force that the platforms and vestibules of the three forward cars were so badly damaged that new coaches had to be put into the train. Electric light globes and glass fixtures in all the coaches were broken, and 100 passengers were thrown from their seats.

All of the injured persons were brought to the Pennsylvania Station for treatment in the emergency hospital there, and it was necessary to send only John D. Gibson of 932 Tremont Avenue, Boston, to Bellevue Hospital. The train was delayed about two hours by the accident, while new coaches were substituted for those damaged in the crash.

BOSTON WELCOMES G. A. R.

One Veteran in Confederate Gray Conspicuous Among Union Soldiers.

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—Thousands of veterans of the civil war and their families, here to attend the fifty-first national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, were officially welcomed to the city tonight by Governor McCall and Mayor Curley. Other speakers were former Governor John L. Bates, Commander in Chief W. J. Patterson of Pittsburgh, and Department Commander Daniel E. Denny of Massachusetts.

A conspicuous figure among the Union soldiers today was a man in Confederate gray—Major Frank M. Burrows, now in the Government service at Washington, but formerly of the Culpeper Minute Men. Major Burrows, hale and hearty at 78 years, was apparently the only Confederate soldier at the encampment.

Several organizations allied with the G. A. R. held meetings today. The National Association of Patriotic Instructors at the opening of the fifth annual convention meeting today adopted resolutions favoring enactment of laws by Congress naming "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem and designating June 14 as annual Flag Day in recognition of the making of the first American flag by Betsy Ross in Philadelphia June 14, 1777.

He Caught on in Ten Minutes

Burroughs Direct-to-Ledger Posting requires no previous experience.

A few minutes after the Burroughs Ledger Posting Machine had come into the office of L. & E. Stirn, silk manufacturers and wholesalers, 105-117 Madison Avenue—the bookkeeper was operating it proficiently—posting as quickly with it as he could with pen and ink—and he'd been a pen-and-ink bookkeeper for years.

There was nothing to it—merely reading the posting media, pressing the right keys, and touching the operating bar. The Burroughs did the rest—

It entered dates, folios, items, terms, debits and credits in their proper places, and automatically computed and printed the balances due in the last column of the ledger leaf.

The work was accurate, for the machine does all adding and subtracting. And it was neat because the Burroughs prints every character that goes on the ledger leaf.

In less than a week, Burroughs Direct-to-Ledger Posting was giving this bookkeeper a positive daily proof of posting and it was making the trial balance "come out" first time through.

This is but one among hundreds of interesting Burroughs installations in and around New York. We can give you information about Burroughs Direct-to-Ledger Posting in your line of business. A 'phone call will bring a Burroughs man to your office at any time.
